Candidates run 'for nothing' in political games

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — There was a novel phenomenon in politics as southwest Missouri Democrats met in Springfield Saturday for their 52nd annual Jackson Day festivities.

A lot of candidates were running, but what were they running for?

"It's a fast track," observed one party veteran. "It's impossible to predict a candidate, much less a winner."

And James Spain, Democratic state chairman said: "It's a case where the office seeks the man."

Spain was referring to the large number of candidates who set up booths and hospitality rooms for the weekend but did not show what office they are seeking.

The signs say "Volkmer in '76" — but not what office State Rep. Harold L. Volkmer, D-Hannibal, is running for.

State Treasurer James Spainhower's booth was distributing buttons reading: "Spainhower for..."

Spainhower is generally expected to finish the inscription by adding "governor."

Jack Schramm, unsuccessful candidate for lieutenant governor in 1972, said he may run for governor, or for Congress from the 2nd Missouri District.

Schramm said his decision depends on the decisionn of Rep. James Symington, who is serving his third term in that St. Louis County district. Symington is saying nothing.

The political experiment in running for nothing in particular has many other catalysts.

In addition to Spainhower and Schramm for governor, State Auditor George Lehr is being mentioned. So is Rep. William Hungate, who represents the 9th Congressional District in northeast Missouri.

Hungate says he is "keeping my options open."

The one officially announced candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, State Sen. William J. Cason, said he's never seen so many candidates running but not running.

Cason predicted, however, that although many names are being mentioned now there ultimately will be only two major candidates vying for the nomination for governor next year.

Cason also predicted he will be one of them and Hungate will not.

> "It's a fast track," observed one party veteran. "It's impossible to predict a candidate, much less a winner."

"He doesn't look like a candidate," said Cason, who is president pro tem of the Missouri Senate.

Cason said Hungate has not campaigned state-wide.

Without holding the governor's office, many Democrats feel their party lacks leadership.

"The political times are confusing," Spain acknowledged. "But Missourians will have everything they like to have on the 1976 ticket."

But Spain also said he does not know who will be on it.

Sen. Stuart Symington is the pivot man in much of the maneuvering. He has insisted he will seek a fifth term although he will have turned 75 by primary time in 1976.

Rep. Jerry Litton, from the 6th District in north and northwest Missouri, reiterated Saturday that he would seek Symington's seat "if the senator does not run, or if I'm convinced the senator cannot win."

Many feel Symington wants his son, Rep. Symington, to succeed him in the Senate and will bow out when that seems assured.

Warren E. Hearnes, governor from 1965 through 1972 and the only man ever to serve consecutive four-year terms, has announced he's running for the senate nomination.

Secretary of State James Kirkpatrick, the dean of elected state officials, a top party vote getter and running for a fourth term, agrees it is a fast track.

"It's too early to place your bet," Kirkpatrick said Saturday. "You don't know who's going to get scratched."

Ford still pushing for Cambodian aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford will press Congress vigorously to approve his request for $222 million in military aid for Cambodia because Cambodian officials have decided to continue their fight, White House officials said Saturday.

When a force of U.S. Marines flew in to evacuate 276 Americans, Cambodians and a few other foreign nationals Friday, it was anticipated that Cambodian government officials would leave at the same time, one administration source said.

"But they decided to stay and maintain the government and maintain the fight," he said. "When they decided to stay and fight, President Ford decided to emphasize he has not dropped the fight to have Congress appropriate extra money for Cambodian aid."

Earlier, Press Secretary Ron Nessen issued a statement which said: "The President has asked me to express his concern over some reports that his speech on Thursday night indicated that he was withdrawing or otherwise not renewing his request for urgent assistance to Cambodia.

"The President's proposal for aid to Cambodia is still before Congress ... The President still hopes that Congress will act quickly to approve assistance to Cambodia."

Congress has resisted Ford's efforts to get more military aid for Vietnam and Cambodia, and has balked already at Ford's $222 million request, made initially three months ago.

Nessen said the United States still has enough money from an earlier appropriation to supply Cambodia with food and ammunition for 10 days to two weeks.

With the Phnom Penh airport temporarily closed because of Communist troop action, the White House said that U.S. planes began dropping supplies by parachute into the city.

The government had been dropping ammunition, fuel and rice to other parts of Cambodia but stopped the airlift Friday. It was ordered resumed Saturday after a strong appeal from U.S. Ambassador John Gunther Dean.

Pentagon sources said Dean was apparently influenced by radio messages from Cambodian air force commanders saying they wanted to continue fighting Communist-led rebels.

Ford ordered the evacuation of Phnom Penh "with a heavy heart" after the Communist Khmer Rouge closed to within one mile of the airport. The U.S.embassy was closed and 86 Americans, 159 Cambodians and 35 other foreign nationals were taken out by helicopter under the protection of 386 Marines flown into Phnom Penh.

Premier Long Boret and other government officials remained in the city. The only one to leave was acting President Sau Kham Koy, whom Long Boret criticized in a radio broadcast, saying his departure showed he was lacking as a leader.

Appaloosas perform at Fairgrounds show

Saturday was the 'kick-off' for a six-month schedule of Appaloosa horse shows in the Colliseum at the Missouri State Fairgrounds.

Approximately 150 registered, purebred horses from Missouri, Kansas and Illinois, participated in 55 events ranging from halter showings for excellent build, to performance activities in roping and racing.

Mrs. Jack Allison, wife of the president of the Missouri Appaloosa Association which hosted the show, explained Appaloosa events are different from regular horse shows. "Appaloosa horses are an Indian breed, and their running and performance events are geared toward Indian customs, not just straight horse racing," she noted.

Saturday's show consisted of five main events: halter showings, performance ability, gymkhana (special activities including roping and cattle cutting tricks for ranch horses). Other events were for pleasure horses.

First place winners received a trophy and $50; second, third and fourth place winners got trophies; a ribbon was given to fifth place winners.

Sunday afternoon the association will continue the show with a cutting horse competition. Local and regional horses will be in the event. The event will be open to only the adult riders.

According to Mrs. Allison, the Missouri Appaloosa Association also will host shows in May, June, July and August.

Congress resumes talks on 'banning the bullet'

WASHINGTON (AP) — While Congress considers legislation to impose new handgun controls, the Consumer Product Safety Commission is moving ahead on a related issue that it says could virtually ban the weapons in America.

Within two weeks its five commissioners, under federal court order, will begin deliberations on a petition to ban handgun bullets as a hazardous substance.

If the agency outlaws pistol bullets, the commission has said, "the practical effect ... would be a virtual ban on handguns," a prohibition unlikely to be enacted by Congress this session.

Some long guns also would be affected, firearms experts assert, because bullets for some handgun calibers are identical to those for rifles and could be interchangeable.

The petition does not seek to ban cartridges, it is aimed only at bullets, the small lead projectiles. Casings, primers and powder are not under consideration.

This back-door approach to ban handguns by outlawing pistol bullets is the idea of the Chicago-based Committee for Handgun Control, founded by four suburban mothers. They say they got the idea from the National Rifle Association.

"Guns without bullets are not dangerous. The bullets are actually taken from the bodies of those who are killed or injured with handguns," the committee has written the safety commission.

The committee says its efforts to ban bullets stems from an inability to obtain federal gun control legislation.

The movement has generated more mail to the commission than any other subject, including products dangerous to infants and children. The ban is opposed by the National Rifle Association.

Susan Sullivan, a founder and president of the Chicago organization, said the idea for the bullet ban came from an article in an NRA magazine expressing concern that the commission might feel it had the authority to outlaw pistol bullets as hazardous substances.

"There was the NRA fussing about the federal government being able to outlaw the sale of ammunition under a loophole in the Hazardous Substances Act. We figured that if the NRA was nervous about it, we really ought to look into it," she said.

Mrs. Sullivan's group petitioned the safety commission, asking for a ban on the sale of handgun bullets, except for use by policemen, the military and licensed security guards.

The commission at first agreed to consider the proposal, but reversed itself Sept. 5, 1974. It decided that while it had jurisdiction to outlaw bullets, the practical effect of that ruling would be to regulate handguns, which it said Congress had not intended it to do.

The Chicago organization took the commission to court. On Dec. 19, 1974, U.S. District Judge Thomas A. Flannery ruled that the commission had the authority to declare handgun ammunition a "banned hazardous substance."

Odd clues add to complexity of Hearst mystery

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The mysterious case of Patricia Hearst has entered a new phase with odd clues adding complexity — and perhaps some shape — to the puzzle.

Is the FBI any closer to finding the fugitive heiress?

"I think so," says Charles Bates, special FBI agent in charge of the case. "We get more information every day." But he isn't saying which clues are the hottest.

Like pieces in a giant picture puzzle, the faces of diverse men and women appeared this week to be fit into place. Could they connect to the solution of one of America's most engrossing mysteries?

The figures say no. Officials say maybe.

With grand juries on the East and West coasts stepping up their probes, more than a dozen new names have arisen in the search for the fugitive heiress.

A lineup of new breed athletes with political overtones has become central to the inquiry. A fugitive artist, a convict and a university student have been mentioned. Questioned by authorities, they are asked where is Patricia Hearst? Few have answered, but their adventures of recent weeks have almost left the missing woman in the background.

Miss Hearst, 21, daughter of Randolph Hearst, president and editor of the San Franciso Examiner, was kidnaped Feb. 4, 1974 and later announced she had joined her captors in the Symbionese Liberation Army (SLA). She is wanted on various criminal charges, including bank robbery.

Here is a rundown on those who captured attention in recent weeks and are likely to hold center stage for awhile:

—Jack and Micki McGee Scott: He is a former track star and writer who seeks reforms in attitudes toward sports. His wife, a writer, works with him. They rented a Pennsylvania farmhouse reputed to have been a possible hideout for Miss Hearst and her comrades.

The Scotts decline comment on the farmhouse or a possible link to Patricia, saying, "We have done nothing wrong. We have committed no crimes." They are daring grand jurors to indict them, saying they could prove their innocence at a trial.

—Bill Walton: The rangy redhaired basketball star, whose hippie life style belies his millionaire status, is the Scotts' close friend. They were living at his Portland, Ore., home when the FBI began asking questions about the farmhouse. Walton says he knows nothing about Miss Hearst and is sorry he spoke to the FBI at all — even to tell them he knew nothing. He has vowed refusal to cooperate with any probe of the Scotts.

—Jay Weiner: Temple University student and friend of the Scotts. He testified March 13 before the Hearst grand jury in Harrisburg, Pa. The Scotts say he was coerced into giving false testimony against them and will recant at his next grand jury appearance. The U.S. attorney says Weiner will be subpoenaed when the panel resumes its inquiry, probably this month.

—Phillip K. Shinnick: The one-time Olympic long-jumper and friend of the Scotts declined to testify before the grand jury in San Francisco saying, "I deeply resent this intrusion into my private affairs. The FBI has harassed my family, friends and professional colleagues." He called the inquiry a "witchhunt" and said it had jeopardized his job as sports studies director at Livingston College of Rutgers University. He says he knows nothing of Patricia Hearst.

—Wendy Yoshimura: A Berkeley artist who disappeared in 1972, her fingerprints were found in the Pennsylvania farmhouse, the FBI says. A fugitive from bombing conspiracy charges, she vanished after a cache of explosives was found in a garage she rented. She is believed to have participated in sports activist groups, such as the Jock Liberation Front, which Scott supported.

—William H. Brandt: Imprisoned at Soledad State Prison, he was the boyfriend of Miss Yoshimura and was arrested in the same case in which the artist is sought.

A student antiwar activist, he pleaded guilty to one count of possessing explosives. His list of prison visitors last summer and winter included Jack Scott, Micki Scott, Jay Weiner and Cathy Soliah, onetime friend of slain SLA member Angela Atwood. Scott once wrote a letter favoring Brandt's probation.

—Ulysses McDaniel and Barbara Kesler: a husband and wife arrested on charges of transporting weapons into Canada. McDaniel is an ex-convict who shared a cell with slain revolutionary George Jackson. Reports have said he once knew members of the SLA and was on the run because he feared the group.

Others entered the case peripherally. Athletes such as Hal and Olga Connally and former football player Dave Meggyesy were questioned as were Walton's relatives; Scott's parents were subpoenaed by the grand jury. John Scott, 66, was excused from testifying after he refused to answer questions; his wife Louise was excused because of ill health.

Mother wants tubal ligation, she thinks

Dear Ann Landers: I am expecting my second child in about six weeks and I want to make sure I don't have a third. When I told my doctor I didn't think my nerves could take another pregnancy, he suggested that I have my tubes tied immediately after the delivery.

Before I make up my mind for sure I need to know a little more about it. We hear a lot about vasectomies, but very little about tubal ligations. Are there any psychological side effects?

I guess what really bothers me is if this baby died in infancy or early childhood I would never be able to have another child. I don't want three children, but I'd hate to have only one. What do you suggest? Please don't tell me to discuss it with my husband. He says it's up to me. — Am Bivilent

Dear Biv: This decision must be yours and yours alone. As for the psychological side effects of a tubal ligation, I can't answer that question either because I know nothing about your level of emotional stability. Some women can go to pieces over a hangnail. Others can sail through an amputation with nary a complaint.

It is imperative that you get some outside counsel from someone who knows you personally. I suggest your clergyman or your physician.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a man in my late 50s. I know a widow who has three children. She is about ten years younger. We like each other. This woman is working and makes a nice salary. She also was left some money by her late husband.

Every weekend this woman wants to be taken to dinner and to the theater or to an expensive movie. I cannot afford it and have suggested that she pay her own way. She says, "This is not the American style. If a man can't afford to take out a lady he has no right to invite her."

I am European. Maybe I don't understand the customs in this country. To me it seems like a very selfish, spoiled outlook. Do you believe that the man must always be the total provider, even if the woman has the money and he has not? — N.Y.

Dear N.Y.: If the friendship is new, I believe the man should certainly expect to pay the woman's way. I gather, however, that you two have been seeing each other for quite some time.

Your companion is obviously aware of your financial problems. If she enjoys your company she should be willing to pay her own way. It would be considerate also, if she cooked a meal for you now and then and purchased a pair of theater tickets.

Dear Ann Landers: My cousin has a 10-year-old daughter who is very much overweight. The relationship between the mother and child is not good. Unfortunately, the mother is a natural beauty and has a beautiful figure.

Last night my husband and I were playing cards with this woman and her brother. (She is divorced.) We heard a loud banging on a door in the back of the house. She explained that she locks her daughter in her room at night so she can't get to the refrigerator. What do you think of this? — Appalled

Dear A.: That unfortunate child needs professional help. Her obesity is probably related to her poor relationship with her mother. Far better to put a lock on the refrigerator door than to make the girl feel like a caged animal.

Inconvenienced skiers have no handicaps

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "My goal is to ski with poles. It's sheer vanity — I hate crutches."

Paul Rosen, a 19-year-old junior college student from Palo Alto, was just beginning to learn on one ski. His right leg was amputated a year ago because of bone cancer.

He was with a group called the National Inconvenienced Sportsmen's Association at Donner Ski Ranch, 90 miles east of Sacramento in the Sierra.

All of the members — who prefer to call themselves inconvenienced rather than handicapped — are blind, deaf or amputees. They were skiing or learning to ski.

Word of the courageous sportsmen's recreational program was brought back by Dr. Richard Perry, professor of physical education at the University of Southern California.

He took 20 men and women — physical education majors from USC and teachers from suburban Garden Grove Unified School District — to the ski ranch to observe the activities.

Perry skied 30 yards across the side of a hill with his eyes closed to get the feel of a blind person skiing.

It was "very scary," he said.

While at the ski ranch, Perry said, "We came here in order to see what kind of things the blind and amputees are capable of doing.

"We will go home with our minds opened up to doing all sorts of new things. You can translate this into whatever you are into."

Perry said he expects to share the group's experiences with the physical education major club at USC and then hopes to conduct in-service programs for the Los Angeles University Community.

It is possible, he said, that specific programs may eventually stem from their experiences.

Chisholm is opposed to financial aide

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Any financial assistance from the federal government for private institutions of learning would have a debilitating impact on public institutions because of the country's economic plight, Rep. Shirley Chisholm, D-NY, says.

However, the congresswoman told the annual alumnae reunion Friday night at all-women's Stephens College, a private school, that she espouses such help by the government and predicted it will take place when the economic crisis is overcome.

Ms. Chisholm, a member of the House Education and Labor Committee, also said, "The greatest challenge of education in the 1970s and 1980s will be for education to address itself to the issues raised by human liberation movements of the past decade."

Cambodian military head assumes government role

SAIGON (AP) — Cambodia's armed forces commander announced Saturday night after the evacuation of Americans and the nation's acting president that he had taken over the leadership of the government with the sanction of the National Assembly. Rebel forces pressed in on Phnom Penh.

Informed sources in Paris said France, former colonial ruler of Indochina, has decided to recognize Prince Norodom Sihanouk's exile Royal Government of National Union, which has been fighting with the rebel Khmer Rouge forces in Cambodia.

With the departure of the Americans sending political shockwaves through the Cambodian capital, Premier Long Boret said earlier in the day that he had asked the National Assembly to turn over power for three months to the military.

He also assailed the departure with the Americans of Acting President Sau Kham Khoy as a demonstration of a lack of leadership.

Gen. Sak Suthsakhan, the armed forces chief of staff, announced in a radio address that the National Assembly, Cambodia's chief legislative body, had suspended its activities for three months and and empowered a committee of four army men and three politicians, including Boret, to run the government to "cope with the present military and political situation."

He added this committee of seven would elect a committee president but for now, he said, he was the nation's leader.

In Washington, White House spokesmen said the airport at Phnom Penh had been closed by rebel action and that the United States had begun air dropping supplies into Phnom Penh.

The United States had been airlifting food and ammunition into Phnom Penh's international airport but sources in Saigon said earlier the airlift had been suspended because of the closing of the U.S. Embassy in Cambodia.

President Ford's press secretary, Ron Nessen, said the United States had enough funds left from earlier Cambodian appropriations to continue sending emergency supplies for 10 days to two weeks.

The Pentagon gave this breakdown of the 276 persons evacuated from Phnom Penh: 159 Cambodians, 82 Americans, six French, six Nationalist Chinese, three Filipinos, three Australians, one Thai, one Spaniard, two Swedes, two Britons, two Canadians, two Italians and seven of various other nationalities.

In this nervous capital, the departure of U.S. Embassy officials and other Americans in an evacuation protected by Marines and U.S. warplanes overshadowed at least momentarily a key battle under way just 40 miles east of Saigon.

Strong Communist-led forces were reported keeping up their pressure on Xuan Loc, a provincial capital, in a battle watched for hints of North Vietnamese and Viet Cong intentions for Saigon.

States test federal system of unemployment compensation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seven states and Puerto Rico have now been forced to borrow from the federal government to pay unemployment insurance benefits. Government officials say trust funds in several other states are nearly depleted.

The growing lines at unemployment offices are costing the states millions of dollars in extra benefits for the jobless and are putting the federal-state unemployment compensation system to the most severe test of its 40-year history.

Michigan, Massachusetts and Puerto Rico joined five other states already borrowing federal funds in order to meet their unemployment insurance obligations in April.

Since January, the government has loaned $491 million. Labor Department officials estimate the government will have to advance the states from $850 million to $2 billion more this year.

Loan requests in April came from Connecticut for $19 million, making a total of $106 million it has borrowed for payments so far this year; Vermont, $3.4 million, total of $12.2 million; Rhode Island, $13.3 million, total of $30.4 million; Washington, $17.3 million, total of $42.4 million; New Jersey, $70 million, total of $235.1 million.

The first-time loans for Michigan were for $30 million; Massachusetts, $25 million, and Puerto Rico $10 million.

The special fund which provides this money, the Federal Unemployment Account, has been drained to its lowest level in years — $53.8 million.

The House Appropriations Committee approved last week the Ford administration's request for $5 billion to replenish the fund and for paying the federal share of existing unemployment compensation programs.

States borrow the money on a no-interest basis, but must pay it back within a two-year period or the unemployment compensation tax on employers in the delinquent states is automatically raised. The tax currently is five-tenths of a per cent of the first $4,200 in wages paid a worker.

James Hashian, a spokesman for the Labor Department's Manpower Administration, said only 19 states had an adequate reserve fund to meet the government's solvency guidelines at the end of 1974. The seven states and Puerto Rico now drawing funds were among those that did not.

Doctors refuse to operate on donors seeking high bid

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (AP) — One Pennsylvania man wants to sell an eye; another offers a kidney for cash. Both have drawn inquiries and donations, but it's unlikely any hospital will handle their hard luck cases.

"First of all, it's medically improper and unethical. In addition, a physician could in theory be charged with the English Common Law crime of mayhem — deliberate maiming," says Dr. Cyril Wecht, who has degrees in medicine and law.

"We will not do it. It's sad a person would be faced with this," says Dr. Daniel Brooks of Presbyterian University Hospital, where all of Pittsburgh's kidney transplants are done.

"If somebody is that desperate ... well, it's horrible," says Dr. Keith Hruska of Barnes Hospital in St. Louis, which turned away a Pittsburgh man after he found a possible buyer for his kidney.

Wecht, also the Allegheny County coroner, acknowledged some individuals might benefit from such transplants.

"But the overall harm would be too great," he said. "For example, a man who had waited months for an acceptable kidney might lose it to somebody who simply had more money.

"It would be organs to the highest bidders."

Wecht said such "commercial cannibalism" also would increase the malpractice threat.

"A humanitarian operation is one thing," he added. "But imagine the unfavorable atmosphere for the hospital and the physician in a purely commercial transaction."

Wecht said donation of human body parts is regulated under the Anatomical Gift Act, and he encourages people to make such donations in their wills.

"There is a definite shortage of kidneys," he said. "Donors for corneal transplants are not as hard to come by."

Last month, Barnes Hospital in St. Louis refused to even test the Pittsburgh man who made his kidney offer after reading of Donald Schlopy of Kane., Pa., who pledged to sell an eye to the high bidder.

Hearings continued in Warrensburg case

(Democrat-Capital Service)

WARRENSBURG — The preliminary hearing for two men charged with first degree murder was continued Friday in Johnson County Magistrate Court. According to Johnson County Prosecuting Attorney Tom Williams, the preliminary hearing was continued, at the request of the defense, until April 17.

Leon Vincent Taylor, 17, and Carl Edward Hardin, 20, both of Warrensburg, are charged with the murder of Warrensburg sign painter Jesse E. Howarter, 62.

Howarter was stabbed to death on the night of April 1. His body was found early the next morning by a roommate, Oliver E. Helsley, in the building where Howarter lived and worked.

The West-Central Missouri Major Case Squad was called to investigate the case April 2, and disbanded the next evening.

George McBroom, spokesman for the squad, said Howarter had apparently interrupted an attempted burglary at a nearby laundry.

Hardin and Taylor remain in the county jail here in lieu of $50,000 bond each.

Sedalian asks court to suppress evidence

(Democrat-Capital Service)

A motion to surpress evidence from a yet unscheduled trial was filed Friday afternoon in Pettis County Circuit Court.

William F. Gravitt, 29, 315 West Henry, charged with second-degree burglary and stealing, filed the petition stating he was subject to "incustodial interrogation by members of the Sedalia police department," and that he was "cajoled, misled, and tricked by Det. Sgt. Perry Franklin into believing that if he confessed, no prosecution would be initiated."

Gravitt is charged in connection with the Feb. 28 burglary at Hubbard School, Osage and Henry. He allegedly took several frozen meat items from a freezer in the school's kitchen.

No date has been set by Circuit Judge Frank Meyer for the motion hearing, or for Gravitt's trial.

Gravitt was arrested by Sedalia police March 4. He is in the county jail in lieu of $3,500 bond.

Cooper County jury acquits Sedalia man

(Democrat-Capital Service)

BOONVILLE — A Cooper County Circuit Court jury Friday night acquitted David Downs, 17, 632 East 16th, of a charge of second degree burglary and stealing. The trial was moved here on a change of venue from Pettis County.

According to Craig Cassing, Downs' attorney, the jury reached its decision after deliberating 30 minutes.

Downs was charged Nov. 19, 1974, with stealing more than $1,000 worth of drugs and merchandise from the Flat Creek Veterinary Hospital, 1701 West Main, on Sept. 25, 1974.

Cassing said the jury did not reveal on what grounds it acquitted Downs. However, Cassing said he asked the jury, in his closing arguments, to acquit Downs on the grounds that the state failed to prove Downs was connected in the burglary or theft.

Prior to the trial Downs was free on $3,500 bond.

Question Answer

My daughter and her husband were receiving a Veterans Pension. He has disappeared. Will my daughter be required to have him declared legally dead to claim his pension?

At one time this may have been required, but now the Administrator of Veterans Affairs, at his discretion, may pay the pension to the veteran's wife and children.

Payments made to a wife or child under this section shall not exceed the amount to which each would be entitled if the veteran died of a non-service connected disability.

Failure of a veteran to reappear would not affect any of the family's entitlement to benefits except burial of the veteran's wife in a national cemetery. This permission would be denied because the veteran would not be available to indicate his willingness to be buried in the same plot at the time of his death.

Israelis teaching desert farming

REHOVOT, Israel (AP) — On the coast of Peru, 900 families are moving down from the Andes Mountains into an area so dry only shrubs grow. In Argentina and Peru, thousands live meagerly in deserts that barely support life.

Israeli farmers have been working in these areas teaching South Americans to grow food in the desert. Now Israel is adding a new dimension to its aid program. It is lending research scientists to develop technology tailor-made to local conditions.

A country which is half desert itself, Israel has developed new techniques for desert farming that have turned thousands of sandy acres into blossoming fields. A center for arid zone research in Beersheba, the capital of the Negev Desert, has been operating for 15 years.

Under the new scheme, Israeli scientists will head research teams at centers on the Peruvian coast, at Vicunia and Los Vilos in Chile, and at Mercedes and Catamarca in Argentina.

The $1.4 million project is sponsored by the Inter-American Development Bank, the U.N. Development Program, U.N. Environment Program and the Israeli government, said Yitzhak Abt of the Israeli Agriculture Ministry, initiator of the project.

The program, and 38 more aid projects in 18 Latin American countries, has obvious political benefits for Israel, which found itself isolated in the Third World after 30 African nations severed diplomatic ties in the past two years.

"We believe these programs create contacts and build friendships," said one Israeli official. "We don't expect immediate results. Our goals are long-range."

The idea for the research centers in South America was raised three years ago. Despite the 1973 coup in Chile and turmoil in Argentina, "there has been a consensus by the governments involved that the previous work was important, and it has continued unabated," Abt said.

The research programs are expansions of earlier projects directed by Israeli advisers. "Up to now we have been dealing in planning and execution. Now we find that we need applied research to discover new techniques of desert farming suitable to the terrain," Abt said.

The projects, which include desalination, rain-making and sun and wind energy, will be aimed at the "quickest application for the widest number of beneficiaries," he added.

Israel is expected to send about 25 scientists on short term missions and work is to begin in a few months, Abt said.

Giant transport flying under new restrictions

WASHINGTON (AP) — All the Air Force's controversial C5 transport plane will be operating under restrictions as a result of last week's air tragedy involving a plane carrying Vietnamese orphans.

The Air Force announced the restrictions Friday "as a precautionary measure ... to assure safe operation of the fleet" pending results of an investigation of the crash.

The restrictions include a prohibition on passengers and were imposed one week after the C5 crash in South Vietnam. More than 200 persons were killed, making it one of the worst aircraft disasters on record.

Besides the restrictions, "a wide-ranging C5 systems review has been initiated to include re-examination of all operational, material and support factors that coding all C5s.

The C5, almost from the time the program began a decade ago, has been the subjct of controversy, principally because of its cost. The per-plane price has soared over the years and is now listed by the Air Force at $54 million.

The plane went into operation in June 1970. One plane was destroyed in a non-fatal crashlanding last September in Oklahoma.

The restrictions imposed on the aircraft include limiting flights in areas of air turbulence, limiting operations on rough runways and eliminating use of the aft cargo door system.

The Air Force said Friday that the C5 is not unsafe. "Just as with any mishap, we want to find out what happened," a spokesman said. "Until we do, we are taking certain precautions."

No report on the crash has been released and the final death toll has not been calculated because experts are still examining the remains.

Military sources said the day of the crash that there was a possibility sabotage may have been involved, but that was discounted by the U.S. Embassy in Saigon.

Reports at the time of the crash said the rear cargo door of the plane blew out and there was "explosive decompression."

Asked why the rear doors of the 77 remaining C5s will not be used during the restriction period, the Air force said:

"Until the findings of the U.S. Air Force Accident Investigation Board are known, we are taking the same precautions applied after any aircraft accident to insure that equipment that might have contributed to, or been the cause of, an accident is not given the opportunity to malfunction again before those board findings are known."

One man's love could be a kiss of death

By EDMUND PINTO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bill Pilot fought back tears as he explained how his love for his Vietnamese wife may mean death for her family.

"It seems like an act of love brought a kiss of death," he said.

"No matter how much I love my wife, if I thought her family would be hurt because I married her, we wouldn't have gotten married."

Pilot, a former U.S. soldier in Vietnam, was expressing concern Friday about Communist reprisals against the families of South Vietnamese women who married American servicemen.

As he spoke about his inlaws, tears welled in his eyes and he told the freshman congressmen listening to him that Vietnam may be just a matter of American policy to the government, but "it's a very emotional and personal tragedy to us."

At one point last week we thought it already was too late and that "we should proceed down to the church and arrange a mass funeral for our relatives," he said.

Pilot of Maywood, Ill., Brand Kahler of Lake Villa, Ill., and John Hollister of Oak Park, Ill., all married Vietnamese women, came to Washington asking for help to save their in-laws before Communist forces take over all of South Vietnam.

They spoke of recrimination and possible death lists because the women married Americans.

Pilot, once in Army counterintelligence, said, "I saw a death list in Hue, the bodies, children, women in ditches."

"I'm here because my wife is crying. My wife asked me 'will I ever see my family again,'" Hollister said. "We're talking primarily about the younger brothers and sisters of our wives."

The three men appeared at a meeting called by freshmen Democrats to discuss President Ford's Vietnam requests. They said there may be as many as 50,000 Vietnamese brides in this country and some 250,000 of their relatives in danger back home because of the marriages.

They told the freshmen they were having trouble getting people to listen to them, that the State Department has 30 people answering telephones about Vietnamese orphans but none for in-laws.

They said the media wouldn't listen to them and as they spoke television news crews dismantled their cameras and lights that had been used to film the earlier proceedings. Most other reporters had already left.

They said they had been walking the halls of the House and Senate office buildings since arriving in Washington this week "and still I can't get an appointment with my own senator, Percy," Pilot said, referring to Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill.

Hailey's money book comes at right time

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Four years ago, when Arthur Hailey got the idea of writing a novel dealing with money, he never expected that its publication would come at a time when money was uppermost in the public's mind.

"Whatever else it is, it's timely," says the author of "The Moneychangers," which focuses on the world of banking and is the latest in his series of books that includes "Wheels," "Airport" and "Hotel."

As he did for those best-sellers, Hailey again spent the first year of his books' usual three-year gestation period traveling extensively to do painstaking research. He talked to people involved in banking at every level, in securities, in law enforcement, in credit card organizations, in the U.S. Treasury — and even went to London to discuss counterfeiting with Scotland Yard.

"It isn't just the facts one acquires. There's a process of osmosis and you begin to feel like somebody actually working in the field you're researching," explains the 55-year-old writer whose accent attests to his British birth.

"This is the most exciting time in history to be alive, and I like to tell a story against the background of the here-and-now, of something that impinges on our lives in various ways," he says. "We are shaped to a large extent by our environment and an essential part of our environment is the technology we live with."

Part of this technology is in the area of bank security and Hailey doesn't think the industry will take him to task for giving away any trade secrets.

"I think I made it plain there's no future in stealing money ever, either by embezzlement or robbery," he declares.

More and more women are moving up to the executive level in banking — "and it's about time," says the writer, who has made one of his leading female characters in "The Moneychangers" a branch bank manager and another a lawyer.

"There's nothing in banking or anything else women can't do. It's a matter of brains. I do think women in many areas have a superior intelligence," says Hailey, who has been married nearly 25 years to his second wife, Sheila. They have two daughters and a son and he has three sons by his first wife.

Hailey admits that the research is the most "fun" of his three-year stint. "I enjoy meeting people, going to fresh places, learning — though as I get older I like less a solid year away from home."

Home since 1969 has been the Bahamas, where he enjoys swimming and a boat "parked at the back door," recreational activities that perhaps account for the good-looking author's tanned face, a startling contrast to his silver hair and gleamingly perfect teeth.

Once research is completed, he starts the six-month planning stage, which includes a number of successive outlines and minibiographies of each character. "It's hard work but I know from experience I'll get a story out of it."

Then, "there comes a point when you can put off writing no longer. I start at 8:30 and work till 4 or 5, five days a week, producing 600 finished words a day. The first draft is in longhand and then I type it and change it. I may spend a morning on one paragraph, redoing it from half a dozen to 20 times till I get it as good as I can make it." The actual writing takes about 18 months, says Hailey, who sold his first novel at age 36.

Injury rate also shows a decline

The number of highway accidents investigated by the Highway Patrol in Pettis County in the first three months of this year was down sharply as compared to the same period in 1974. The Patrol also noted there were fewer persons injured in those accidents than last year.

According to statistics released this week, the Patrol investigated 49 accidents in the county during the first three months of 1975. That compares to 68 accidents in the same period last year. The Patrol said that 20 persons were hurt in the 1975 accidents, compared to 27 last year. Two persons died in the first three months of 1974, compared to none this year.

Accidents for March alone were down from 23 last year to 17 last month. Two persons were killed in March, 1974, and eight injured. That compares to no fatalities last month and 15 persons injured.

Statistics for the first three months this year in other area counties are as follows:

Benton County — 38 accidents, 2 fatalities, 10 injured.

Henry County — 41 accidents, 2 fatalities, 11 injured.

Johnson County — 102 accidents, no fatalities, 66 injured.

Lafayette County — 81 accidents, 3 fatalities, 25 injured.

Cooper County — 63 accidents, no fatalities, 45 injured.

Moniteau County — 24 accidents, no fatalities, 5 injured.

Morgan County — 42 accidents, no fatalities, 33 injured.

With prices rising constantly and food going up fastest of all, many people have taken to planting their own vegetable gardens this year. All over Sedalia, plots of freshly plowed ground can be seen. While, at left, Henry Harris, 1309 East Boonville, tills his family's garden next to their house.

CMSU history professor to address group

Dr. Leslie Anders, professor of history at Central Missouri State University, Warrensburg, will be the featured speaker at the Pettis County Historical Society meeting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Broadway Presbyterian Church Westminster Room.

Dr. Anders will speak on the subject, "The Spirit of '76: Backward and Forward." The meeting is one of several events that will open the Bicentennial observance in this area.

The speaker earned his bachelor of arts degree, his masters and his doctor of philosophy in history degrees from the University of Missouri. He has been an educator since 1955 and is the author of three books dealing with military history. A fourth is to be published this year.

He is a member of the Governor's Advisory Committee, Missouri Sesquicentennial Commission, Missouri American Revolutionary Bicentennial Commission and the Order of Mark Twain.

The meeting is open to the public.

Business news

April 20-26 has been designated by Missouri Governor Christopher Bond as "Realtor Week" in the state, it was announced Friday by Charley Hassen, a member of the Sedalia Board of Realtors.

In his proclamation, Bond noted there are almost 500,000 realtors and realtor-associates nationally. The right of private real property ownership, Bond stated, is "one of the most fundamental of human rights.

OTTERVILLE — The board of directors of the Bank of Otterville, at its monthly business meeting recently, named Mrs. Melva Fowler to serve on the board for a year.

Mrs. Fowler is a native of the Otterville area and is owner of the Fowler FeedStory. She recently attended the annual women banker's conference at Tan-Tar-A resort.

Morris M. Hill, Moberly, has been named plant foreman for the Sedalia Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. Hill has been plant foreman in Moberly since 1972. In his position here, he will be responsible for all repair of telephone sets, residence and business, as well as outside telephone cables.

He is a native of Canton, Miss., and received his B.A. degree in industrial relations from Rockhurst College, Kansas City, in 1972.

CD weather watch meeting scheduled

The Sedalia-Pettis County Civil Defense Agency will hold a meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the county courthouse to organize its severe weather watch program for 1975.

Jerry Iuchs, director, said slides of actual tornadoes, compiled by the Weather Bureau, will be shown. Anyone interested in taking part in the weather watch program is urged to attend the meeting.

Chances for confirmation about even

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — After three grueling appearances before the Senate Gubernatorial Appointments Committee, David Rodney Miller said Friday he feels his chances are about even for being confirmed to the Missouri Public Service Commission.

Miller, who last appeared before the committee Wednesday, also said he is uncertain what effect PSC Chairman James Mauze's resignation Thursday will have on his own nomination.

Miller was named by Gov. Christopher S. Bond subject to Senate confirmation to fill the seat of William R. Clark, who resigned during Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. rate hike hearings, saying he had been the guest of the company on a Texas hunting trip.

The resignations leave only three members on the commission, the mimimum number needed to transact business.

The committee has questioned Miller's administration of a federally funded program and could vote on the appointment next Wednesday.

Irresponsible label applied

KANSAS CITY (AP) — "The executive, whether Democrat or Republican, and the Congress—all have been irresponsible about the economy for 10 bloody years," Rep. Richard Bolling, D-Mo., said Friday night.

Bolling was one of four members of Congress who considered the country's economic travails at the Robert F. Kennedy Symposium sponsored by the University of Missouri-Kansas City.

He was joined by Sens. George McGovern, D-S.D., and Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., and Rep. Jerry Litton, D-Mo. George Herman, Columbia Broadcasting System newsman, also served on the panel.

McGovern, referring to President Ford's call Thursday night for assistance to South Vietnam, labeled it "a call to hold fast to obsolete policies rejected by the Congress and the American people."

Packwood drew applause when he said McGovern had more foresight on the Vietnam War than anyone else in the country.

The Oregon Republican said the defense budget should be cut, but doubted if large cuts would be made. He said, "I'd like to see the troops brought home from Europe and demobilized. That would save $6 billion a year, but it won't happen."

Packwood predicted a 2-year budget deficit of $150 billion which, he said, could produce 15 per cent interest rates or 15 per cent inflation.

Bolling, a traditional critic of Congress, said:

"Even with the reforms in the House, with the good intentions and the Democratic majorities, we still don't have the ability to function effectively in Congress . . . If we're lucky we will start turning the economy around so that unemployment only goes up a little more before it recedes. We'll be lucky if we're out of recession by 1980 . . . The government of the United States, like the Democratic Party and the church I belong to, cannot adequately be described as organized."

Litton added to the indictment of Congress by saying, "At the airport I found a button I could push and hot air comes out. I felt right at home."

A phobia about eyes

The Phoenix Nest
Edited by Martin Levin

By DERECK WILLIAMSON

"At night, watch both sides of the road for glowing eyes."

These are nervous times, and warnings like that don't help matters any. In this instance, a hunting magazine was discussing deer, and safe driving. The advice is sound. Glowing eyes may mean that an animal is standing there, waiting to rush out in front of your car and smash your plastic grille.

Spotting the eyes in time allows you to brake your car so that the deer passes safely in front of you. Then, with a sigh of relief, you can speed up again. A second deer will leap from the woods and smash your plastic grille.

I wish I hadn't read the article, because it brought back memories of glowing-eye sightings when I was a kid. I saw them everywhere — in dark cellar corners, in shrubbery, down sink drains, and even in patterns of wallpaper.

Once I was staying overnight at my uncle's house, and I thought I saw glowing eyes peeking in my third-story bedroom window. My uncle tried to calm me, by explaining that the window was 40 feet from the ground.

"So you could anyone look in?" he asked.

"He was 40 feet tall!" I yelled.

My glowing-eye phobia can be traced directly to a certain old Sherlock Holmes movie. Normally, we kids went to the movie house on Saturday afternoons, but once in a while my parents let me take in an early-evening show. The theater was only a short whistling walk from my house. This time, it would be a fast screaming run.

Holmes and the bumbling Watson spent an hour and a half, to the accompaniment of weird violin music, looking for a murderer whose spare-time hobby was peeking out of bushes and doorways. He killed people with a strange weapon which strangled and clubbed at the same time.

My nerves were frayed beyond repair before they caught the man, an Argentinian wielding a bola. The weapon, made of steel balls attached to lengths of cord, proved deadly when flung whirling at London suburbanites.

The movie finally ended. Since it was unthinkable for me to walk home, I sat through the second show. More glowing eyes. Knowing the murderer made it worse somehow. Swish swish, club club, arrghh arrghh, peek peek, glow glow, chuckle chuckle.

After the second show ended, I considered staying in the theater all night. But the usher ushered me out to the dark street, and I was on my own.

I figured I might have a better chance of survival if I ran all the way home. After all, three blocks is not too far when you're terror-stricken.

Eerie violin music and the swish swish of approaching bolas followed me as I scampered down the center of Main Street. I ran out of breath opposite a dark alley, and had to stop. The town's dim street lamps — exact replicas of those that the victims had been found dead under — lined the empty street.

Suddenly, glowing eyes appeared in the alley. I gathered all my strength and, by running alternately backwards and forwards, managed to gain the safety of my house a scant second ahead of my own sanity.

In the years that followed, safety experts would have been proud of me. Nobody kept a more careful eye out for glowing eyes at night. On both sides of the road.

But although the hunting magazine's advice is excellent, I'm afraid they've over-simplified things.

Those aren't always animals looking at you.

Some answer is no answer at all

By HENRY MORGAN

A beer manufacturer has announced that he is bringing out a new design for his cans that will "help celebrate the 200th anniversary of our great country." Beer can collectors will surely be pleased to be able to add to their other prizes a portrait of the father of our country done in genuine aluminum.

Other brewers will catch up on the idea, and we can look forward to the first container from the ateliers of Yves St. Laurent and from the fertile brains of Gloria Vanderbilt, Dior, and, for the man's brew, John Weitz.

This will take us to the ultimate Answer. Some day, and it can't be too soon for me, a beer maker will have someone design a can that looks like real grass. Not the can, of course, but the outside of it. Others will follow with cans decorated in flowers, fruit/fresh off the tree, birds, perhaps, and squirrels.

When this happens, beer drinking automobilists will be encouraged by a mass campaign to: PLEASE THROW YOUR EMPTY BEER CANS OUT THE WINDOW. HELP KEEP AMERICA BEAUTIFUL.

Ain't that a swell answer?

Weed lover

Peter Miller, Port Charlotte, Fla., points out what he considers the fine qualities of a yard gone to weeds at his home. He thinks the weeds have beauty and likes to watch their natural cycle of growth and death. He also says he finds many of them tasty, such as a nasturtium he has just popped into his mouth. A neighbor and the local health department, however, find them neither beautiful nor tasty. He has been ordered to mow his yard or face legal action.

Lousy drums

By ERMA BOMBECK

I've told you before about my son who marches to a different drummer.

Well, between the drummer and the drumee. I'm going to goose step my way into an institution.

I have been driven literally crazy by a child who is flakier than acute dandruff. Dumb things. Like playing "Bridge Over Troubled Waters" on the push button phone, adding $34 to the bill. Crawling out of the Grand Canyon and saying, "I have to go back. I left my billfold at the bottom." Leaving his cat to guard his bicycle.

Then one day you say firmly, "From here on in, you learn to live with your own stupidity and your own forgetfullness. Grow up!"

It was 3 a.m. last night when I got the call from him that he had returned from a skiing trip and was in a dark parking lot phone booth on the south side of town alone. "Where's my car you said you'd leave for me?" he asked.

"In the garage. We couldn't move it when you took the car keys with you."

"Right. So can you come and get me?"

Deep breath. "Absolutely not! Call a cab. You're on your own."

3:05. Suppose that was his last dime and there's a car at the curb with a gang of hoods in it armed with chains who won't believe that a kid with all that skiing equipment wouldn't have any money on him and punish him for it.

3:10. Suppose the police see him in a phone booth late at night with a big red S on his shirt for Snow and say, "We've got another Superman loonie on our hands, Walt. Let's run him in." And he spends the night in a cell full of perverts.

3:15. I've got it. The cab driver picks him up but is weird and not really licensed by the cab company but is filling in for the driver he has just done in.

3:30. Wake husband and show him the baby book.

"Remember? It seems like just last week when he used to sit up in his little bed and say, 'Mama more milk.'" "That WAS last week," he snarled. "Go to sleep!"

3:40. The air is fresh tonight. People should spend more time pacing their driveway. "HERE HE COMES!"

"Don't you see?" I explained as he fell into bed. "I had to be cruel to punish you to teach you a lesson. It's time you accepted the responsibility for your own actions. Do you see that?"

As he snored I marvelled at how he could sleep. Those lousy drums he was marching to kept me awake the rest of the night.

Salary hike plan rejected

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Christopher S. Bond's plans to give 5,000 of the lowest paid state workers a one-step salary hike next year have been tentatively rejected by the Missouri House Appropriations Committee, Bond says.

The House panel has given preliminary approval to bills that leave out the hike, the governor said Friday in a memo to state agency heads.

The tentatively approved measures also delete a 5 per cent merit raise for one out of five state employes, Bond said. He had requested the merit hike in his budget.

In addition to these hikes, Bond has budgeted a 6 per cent across-the-board raise for state employes next year.

A state budget official said the panel has rearranged the 6 per cent raise. The spokesman said some agencies haven't received any hike for their personnel budget, while others have received tentatively a 15 per cent increase.

International Shoe to shut Sikeston plant

SIKESTON, Mo. (AP) — Economic factors were cited Friday in an announcement by the International Shoe Company of plans to shut down its plant here.

Galen Kruger, president of the Sikeston Industrial Commission, said the announcement came from an ISC spokesman in St. Louis, who cited declining sales.

The ISC plant, one of 10 perated by the company in Missouri, has been in operation since 1923 and employs more than 500 persons.

Village will show effects of industralization

By THOMAS S. BROWN
Associated Press Writer

STURBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Old Sturbridge Village, widely known for its working exhibit of early farm life in New England, will demonstrate how industry sprang to life in those same Yankee towns.

A multimillion-dollar expansion project, already in the planning stage for seven years, will move an 1823 cotton mill from Eastford, Conn., to land adjoining the present farm museum on the central Massachusetts location.

The village will also reconstruct several other buildings often found in the neighborhoods of the first mills.

An 1830 mill owner's house from Willimantic, Conn., has already been dismantled at its original site and put in storage for future use at Sturbridge.

Still to be moved is a tavern acquired in Northfield, Mass. Preparations have also begun for the construction of a sawmill patterned after one that stood in Bow, N.H., until a 1938 hurricane.

Other buildings that will eventually be added include tenement houses, a blacksmith shop, cider mill and company store.

Putting together an industrial village of the 1820s is no simple task. Determined to be as authentic as possible, village staff members have spent years combing New England to learn the details of the nation's oldest cotton mills and to find buildings that would be suitable for Sturbridge.

Architectural historian Richard Candee visited and photographed nearly every early textile building in New England before settling on the abandoned Phoenix Mill in Eastford, 20 miles away, as the best for the museum.

Its proximity to Sturbridge was one reason the Phoenix mill was chosen, said technology researcher Theodore Z. Penn.

"Another factor was that this particular building had no future. It was falling apart. If we hadn't acquired it, it would have been down by now."

The two-story fieldstone structure, powered by a waterwheel on the Still River, produced coarse cotton cloth and employed about eight men, 20 women and five children under 12. Available records indicate it remained in production through the 1860s, tied to a cotton industry centered at Providence, R.I.

When the mill is moved to Sturbridge, it will be situated on a stream and will once again turn out sheeting and shirting cloth. A major problem has been to track down enough data to reconstruct early mill machinery, nearly all of which had been turned into scrap by the time of World War II.

"We don't want to do just a partial restoration and have the mill run on electricity," Penn said. The aim is to produce a completely accurate replica.

That goal ties in with a village commitment to present early 19th-century life without making it unrealistically quaint or lovely.

"We're not trying to portray anything as attractive," Penn said. "We want to let people see life the way it was and decide for themselves whether it was drudgery."

Staff members say it is difficult to predict how soon the major part of the mill community will be completed. One reason is their insistence on exhaustive research before attempting a restoration project. Another is uncertain funding.

Gate receipts from the 600,000 yearly visitors at Sturbridge are used to maintain existing displays. Any expansion has to be financed from outside grants.

If enough money can be obtained, workers will start building the sawmill this year, using handhewn lumber cut from a village forest. Tests of the water wheel system that will run the sawmill have already been conducted at Worcester Polytechnic Institute, and hydraulic engineers are preparing the mill site.

The cost of the entire village project is estimated at well over $2 million.

Montana hay-lift could be too late

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — An emergency haylift to snow-stranded cattle in north-central Montana may have come too late for as many as 33,000 newborn calves trapped by a raging three-day blizzard.

"There's no doubt there's going to be heavy losses," said Leo Kolstad, regional chairman of U.S. Department of Agriculture's emergency board.

Kolstad inspected some blizzard-stricken areas Friday, then called superiors in Washington, D.C., and requested broad discretionary authority to designate as many as nine counties as disaster livestock feed areas.

"The state's in a very critical position as far as adequate supply of feed for cattle," Kolstad said. "The most serious problem is ranchers who can't get out to check and don't know."

Gov. Thomas L. Judge declared a state of emergency on Thursday as the storm subsided and ordered nine Army National Guard helicopters to begin a 48-hour airlift of hay and oats to livestock trapped in outlying pastures.

A full grown cow consumes 30 pounds of feed per day. Most stockmen provide supplemental feed on an every-other-day basis.

Col. A.J. Christiansen termed the operation a success, but Kolstad said as many as 20 per cent of the area's estimated 161,420 newborn calves may not have survived the two-foot snowfall, towering drifts and freezing winds.

"If a cow and calf are out in the storm, the calf will have a tendency to lie down," Kolstad said. "The mother will stay, they get drifted in and then they're too weak to fight."

Spring calving and lambing were about 65 per cent complete in the area raked by snow and up to 50 mile-an-hour winds from Monday to Wednesday.

It was the fourth major storm since the first day of spring, March 21, and stockmen in this heavily agricultural state already have reported widespread outbreaks of pneumonia and intestinal flu among their herds.

A rancher in the northern Montana town of Galata reported he was unable to spot any of his estimated 900 cattle Thursday night after searching broad areas by bulldozer.

Kolstad said his office had received reports that a 250,000-acre grazing range near Harlowton in central Montana was totally inaccessible. He expressed optimism that plow crews could break open some access roads before Monday.

Glacier, Liberty and Toole counties in the north were declared disaster feed areas last fall due to drought conditions, and those counties will continue to be eligible for free delivery of federal low-cost feed until May 31, Kolstad said.

He said he may recommend disaster designation for six other counties after examining field reports from other USDA officials.

Q — I fail to understand why a person cannot have a pet in this town and live in peace. Just because the neighbor doesn't like dogs I have to literally guard my dog and my children when they are walking the dog in our own yard because the neighbor is walking his yard, which is next to mine, with a loaded gun to kill my dog. I was informed by authorities that anyone ... can carry a gun as long as he doesn't fire it. Is there nothing that can be done about this? — M.C.

A — Your neighbor is within his rights to carry his gun. However, even if he points it at anyone, he could be charged with criminal assault, Hot Line was told by an attorney. If the dog crosses onto his property, he would be justified in shooting it.

Do prospective landlords have the right to investigate prospective renters and can a person be denied an opportunity to rent a house or apartment because they have children? — C.H.

A — According to City Counselor Bob Fritz, anyone can be investigated through the simple process of questioning past landlords, employers etc. Fritz also said he knows of no city, state or federal statutes prohibiting a property owner from turning down renters because they have children. However, denying a renter access to rent on the basis of race or sex is prohibited by law.

Q — Would you please tell me if the Social Security office is still in Sedalia? — B.V.

A — The district Social Security office, located at 825 Thompson Blvd., is open from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. The telephone number if 827-0450. A second office is located in Warrensburg.

Q — There is a church on the corner of 13th and Marvin. Ditzfeld Transfer is located across the street on the east side of the church and parks its trucks on the church side of the street, instead of on their side. Is there a law to prohibit them from parking by the church, at least on Sunday? — J.K.

A — Police Chief William Miller said there is no city ordinance to prohibit such parking by the firm. However, he suggested the church contact Ditzfeld to see if a solution could be found.

Food corporation is sued

NEW YORK (AP) — The Securities and Exchange Commission filed suit this past week against United Brands Co., the multinational food corporation that admitted making $2 million in secret payments to foreign government officials last year.

The civil suit charged the company with falsifying its financial reports to hide a payment of $1.25 million in cash to an Honduran official plus a $750,000 casy payment to a European official.

A day later, stockholder Henry Neugarten filed suit against 12 of United Brand's 14 directors, two company officers and the estate of Eli Black, the former chairman and architect of the company's growth, who fell to his death Feb. 3 from his 44th floor office in mid-Manhattan.

Neugarten's suit, filed on behalf of the company's assets and its stockholders, accused the officers and directors of mismanagement and of violations of federal securities laws requiring company officials to fully disclose their financial dealings to the SEC and stockholders.

United Brands, which markets its bananas under the Chiquita label, has extensive banana operations in Honduras. Last April, the Honduran government raised the export tax on bananas to 50 cents per 40-pound box. Four months later the export tax of United Brands bananas was halved to 25 cents, resulting in a savings to the corportion of about $7.5 million.

The company said the payment to the Honduran official was made in September 1974 in connection with that tax. The Wall Street Journal identified the official as Honduran President Oswaldo Lopez, although his government denies it.

The SEC suit did not name the European country. That country was Italy, according to the Wall Street Journal.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials soared more than 30 points during the week, closing at 789.50, its highest level in eight months.

The market advance came despite a quarterly dividend cut by Ford to 60 cents a share from 80 cents, and nearly flat earnings for International Business Machines Corp., a Wall Street favorite.

IBM said first quarter profits were up about one per cent to $437 million as slow sales, high interest costs on borrowed money and the decline in inventory value as prices fall cut sharply into their profitability.

Banks continued to profit from the higher margins they are now charging on many loans.

Mansion House mortgage pact is canceled

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Federal officials have notified the owners of the Mansion House complex in downtown St. Louis that their mortgage arrangement has been canceled and that they must pay $10 million immediately, the St. Louis Globe-Democrat has reported.

The newspaper said in a copyrighted story in today's editions that the order was issued by H.R. Crawford, assistant secretary for the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The order came after a government audit of the project's operations uncovered massive and flagrant irregularities, the newspaper said, and could result in an order for the project's owners, Henry Ford II and Harold Geneen, to repay the full amount of the $36 million Mansion House mortgage.

Crawford, in a letter to Ford, Geneen and project manager Maurice B. Frank, said he was taking the action after Frank and the operating company, Remsco, ignored numerous HUD demands that the firm stop violating HUD regulations and contractual agreements, the Globe-Democrat said.

Among the violations cited by the paper were excessive management fees, uncollected rent totaling more than $111,000 and diversion of federally-provided funds to convert one tower of the luxury apartment complex into a Holiday Inn motel.

Farm aid veto decision made

By DON WATERS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford has decided to veto pending farm aid legislation that the administration contends would push up consumer prices for dairy products, congressional and White House sources say.

Chairman Thomas S. Foley of the House Agriculture Committee and others said Friday that White House legislative aides were informing members of a Senate-House conference committee on the bill that a presidential veto is inevitable.

The conference panel, which will try to compromise differing versions of farm aid passed by the Senate and House, will not hold its first meeting until Monday.

"I am surprised as well as deeply disappointed to learn of this reported decision by the President because I believe we acted in moderation and responsibility in consideration and passage of this bill," Foley, D-Wash., said in a statement.

In deciding on a veto, Ford has taken the advice of Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz, who has advocated a veto for weeks.

Butz and other administration officials said the legislation would raise the retail price of milk by 8 cents a gallon, cheese by 10 cents a pound and butter by 20 cents a pound within a year because of higher price supports for dairy products.

In this issue, Butz finds himself in an unusual alliance with consumer-oriented members of Congress representing urban constituencies. They contend the over-all cost to taxpayers and consumers would range from $400 million to more than $4 billion.

The legislation would raise from 80 to 85 per cent of parity the price support level of dairy products and also boost the prices that the government guarantees farmers will receive for grain and cotton. Cotton already is selling near the price at which the government would make payments to growers.

Parity is defined at the point at which the price a farmer receives for his product equals the cost of producing it plus a reasonable profit.

In general, the Senate-passed version provides more generous support levels than does the House version. The Senate, but not the House, voted to increase supports for tobacco growers and to place a temporary ban on the importation of foreign-bred beef in an attempt to improve prices for the U.S. livestock industry.

Supporters of the legislation say it is needed to protect rural America during the nation's current difficulties and to encourage farm production.

A high Agriculture Department official said earlier this week that a veto by Ford was considered politically safe in the farm belt 18 months before the next presidential election.

"Nobody will remember as long as farm income is good next year," he said.

Atlanta's progress reputation on line

ATLANTA — (LENS) — Early risers in Atlanta's Marriott Motor Hotel sometimes come down to the dining room to find the city's corpulent mayor already shovelling down a generous breakfast before setting off for a hard day's work at city hall. Fourteen months after taking office as the first black mayor of a major southern city, Maynard Jackson's appetite for bacon and eggs and grits is considerably heartier than his popularity among the citizens of Atlanta.

A couple of years ago it was toasted as "the world's next great city;" today Atlanta is grappling with the problems of rapid expansion hotly followed by rapid recession, and the mayor is getting the blame for the way the fight is going.

The grumbles and accusations have recently become so intense that they have threatened to shatter the self-confidence and strong sense of civic pride that have incubated Atlanta's lusty growth.

The city's success in recent years had become legendary, and the legend nurtured greater success. Atlanta's early role as a center of transport blossomed in the 1960s and early 1970s.

Its airport became the second busiest in the United States, offering excellent communications to all parts of the country, and so helping to bring prosperity to the city. With prosperity came the offices of most major American companies, whose employes were drawn too by the exciting architecture of the city center and the pleasantly wooded character of the residential areas. A baseball team that included Hank Aaron, the game's greatest practitioner and a fine symphony orchestra were additional attractions.

But probably the main factor in Atlanta's astonishing growth was its history of harmonious race relations. The existence of a group of black colleges including Morehouse and Atlanta University had enabled blacks to climb the educational ladder more easily than in other parts of the south. Once educated, they found it easier to get jobs, if not in the south then elsewhere.

The resulting lack of tension was reinforced by the attitudes of a farsighted newspaper editor, Ralph McGill, an unusually liberal chief of police, Herbert Jenkins, and a succession of progressive mayors. One of these, William Hartsfield, described Atlanta as a city "too busy to hate," a slogan which held the key to Atlanta's success, for those who ran the city were businessmen who realized that race riots were bad for business.

In 1969, however, control of the mayor's office slipped from the business community with the election of Sam Massell, a Jewish liberal who built a coalition of white and black voters to defeat the businessmen's candidate.

At the same time it became clear that the racial composition of the city was changing rapidly. By 1973 the city's registered voters were evenly divided between the races, and as deputy mayor, the 35-year-old Jackson had little difficulty in winning that year's mayoral election.

He did so with the support not just of the black community but also of many white liberals and white businessmen. But in the past year he has antagonized almost all of them.

The first of Jackson's plans to go wrong was a bungled attempt to sack the police chief, John Inman, who was considered racist. Having given him his notice, it emerged that the mayor had no power to do so. Ignominiously, Jackson could only superimpose a "public safety commissioner's above Inman's head.

This job went to Reginald Eaves, an old college friend of the mayor, and just one of the boys for whom Jackson is said to be providing jobs. (Eaves's reputation has not been enhanced by the recent disclosure that his former executive secretary, now suspended, had an extensive criminal record, including arrests for the possession of heroin.)

More serious are the charges that the mayor is either hostile or indifferent to the cares of the business community. These charges were made most forcefully in the autumn when a group of businessmen and property owners called Central Atlanta Progress wrote to Jackson giving warning that some firms were contemplating leaving the city center because of worries about crime and racial tension and the "perceived attitude of the mayor as anti-white."

Since then both the mayor and the chamber of commerce have gone out of their way to assure everyone that everything is just fine, and that no division between them exists. Ivan Allen, president of the chamber of commerce, recently said that "Atlanta's business community is committed to the continued strength of the central core, more than is true in any other city in America. The business community has no intention of deserting Atlanta."

If such statements are true, why are they being made? The answer is that the mayor and the chamber of commerce have had their differences and some companies have taken fright, the airlines, for instance. The mayor had an extensive wrangle last year over the siting of Atlanta's new airport. The airlines — who are going to pay for it — wanted the airport to the northwest of the city, to be relatively near most of its users, who live in the northern suburbs; the mayor preferred a site in Henry county to the southeast, where he wants to encourage development. In the end the mayor backed down, but only at some cost in terms of goodwill.

Jackson could better afford such skirmishes if he had not antagonized so many of his constituents or if he had the wholehearted support of the city council. But the recession has hit the south harder than most parts of the country, and has handicapped him in improving the city's public services. He has undoubtedly disappointed many of those who voted for him.

Jackson is still, in his own words, "the youngest, fattest, blackest mayor in Atlanta's history;" he can still engender awe and admiration with his silver-tongued oratory; and he can still display a sense of humor by clambering into the boxing ring with Muhammad Ali, as he did two months ago in order to promote black business in Atlanta. But for a nice guy with good intentions he seems to have lost a lot of friends in just one year.

Many of the charges against him are unreasonable. It is certainly true that he has been administratively unpolished and politically inept. But he has made some useful innovations in city government, such as setting aside one day each month when anyone may come and talk to him in city hall, and many if not all of his appointments have been good ones. And he has committed no single heinous mistake. His errors have been those of inexperience and overambition.

He has also had bad luck in taking office just as the recession gathered speed, affecting, as it has done, the building and tourist trades, both of which are important to Atlanta.

Even so, nearly $400 million worth of construction is going ahead, including the $35 million World Congress Center and a 74-story hotel on Peachtree Street.

The only way this could all go sour is if the city loses its precarious self-confidence and succumbs to internecine warfare. That is now the danger.

The city was 38 per cent black in 1960; today it is 55 per cent. In 1960 its schools were 48 per cent black; today they are 86 per cent. The murder rate is higher than Ulster's, and though most crimes are committed by black against black, the whites are leaving for the relative safety of the suburbs in disturbing numbers. Such statistics suggest a pattern of development all too like that of so many northern cities.

The city maintains its basic assets: its geographical position as a communications center, its untroubled racial character and an atmosphere as effervescent as the Coca-Cola it produces.

The worry is that these will be dissipated if the political power of the blacks and the economic power of the whites cannot be coupled to get Atlanta through a period of recession so that it may merge, if not as the world's next great city, at least as the most prosperous town in the south.

Buena Vista operation making a come-back

The Buena Vista home for the elderly on Georgetown Road appears to be on the way to recovery following financial difficulties and the resignation of its administrator last fall.

But running in the black means operating "on a shoestring" with sharply increased patient rates, according to Herman Wallace, director of the Pettis County Family Services Office.

To make the county nursing home operation a break-even business, Wallace says monthly rates were raised from $250 to $325 per month in October, once additional federal welfare funds for the elderly became available. Patient rates then were raised again last month to $345 per month.

According to the Buena Vista accountant and treasurer Frank Wagner, the home "seems to be running more smoothly" now that patient rates have been raised. Financial statements for December and January show the home operating without a deficit. Statements for February and March have not yet been compiled.

But break-even operation has not always been the case. According to County Clerk Mrs. Mary Jane Wilson, the County Court paid a total of $15,745.59 last year for building repairs and deficits at the home. Although the court sets aside about $10,000 each year to subsidize Buena Vista, she said the extra funds came from the court's 5 per cent emergency fund for unbudgeted county items.

Mrs. Wilson explained that the last state audit of Pettis County, from Jan. 1, 1971 through Dec. 31, 1973, showed the court paid $7,899 in 1971 for Buena Vista, $12,564 in 1972, and $847 plus $6,853 for social services general revenue funds in 1973.

Presiding Judge John Bluhm Jr. told The Democrat-Capital the court is pleased with the nursing home's lease agreement with the county, "but not when the contract is overlooked."

Bluhm explained the 46-bed Buena Vista home and farm are owned by the county and are leased for $1 each year to the Pettis County Association for Social Services Inc. — a non-profit, 12-member organization established to administer the home. According to Bluhm, building and grounds repairs are paid for by the County Court, but meeting operating expenses is not part of the agreement.

Bluhm, however, indicated the court has picked up the home's operating deficit each month for as long as he can remember. He said members of the social services board met with the court last September to discuss financial problems. "They knew they were having problems and they wanted to get back on a paying basis. They were even running on a deficit when I came onto the court two years ago," Bluhm said.

Mrs. Carolyn Hendrickson, chairman of the social services board, said the 1974 deficit was caused by rising costs and inadequate patient revenues. "We ran on the lowest charges for many years. And with rising prices, we just couldn't operate on $200 to $250 each month received per patient," she said. "Patient revenues just weren't large enough to pay operating expenses. But we're finally coming out of being in the red, and we're appreciative to the County Court."

According to Bluhm, operating losses caused the social services board to investigate home expenses and money management last year. Although the board is in charge of the bookkeeping, he indicated much of this work is left to the nursing home administrator.

"They (the social services board) got to digging," said Wallace, a social services board member. "And ... (past administrator Mrs. Pauline Skinner) just walked out."

Mrs. Hendrickson said the board did not fire Mrs. Skinner nor did it blame her for the home's economic problems.

"I think, maybe, it was a lack of communication between the administrator and the board. We just didn't understand each other. And as far as I know, Mrs. Skinner chose not to be administrator," said Mrs. Hendrickson. Mrs. Skinner refused comment.

Despite the additional subsidy of nearly $6,000 for the home last year, Judge Bluhm said the court has no real alternative.

"There aren't enough homes in the county to care for everybody," Bluhm said. "And if the court didn't pick up the deficit tab, the county would have to pay to support these people anyway. You see, the County Court is responsible for its indigent people." There is only one person on Buena Vista's waiting list, it was reported.

Confirming Mrs. Hendrickson's statement that patient rates had to be raised, Wallace pointed out how the $345 per month figure was arrived at by board members.

Wallace explained federal Supplemental Security Income (SSI) payments, "not available until about five or six months ago," allowed the social services board to raise patient care rates. Along with the maximum state welfare payment of $200 per month and a maximum SSI payment of $146 per month, patient rates could be raised to $345 per month.

According to Wallace, federal and state welfare payments are dependent upon social security payments, railroad pensions and all individual income received. He indicated the social services board gave the rate hike lengthy consideration because a majority of Buena Vista's patients are indigent.

Wallace further explained 33 of the 45 patients presently living at the home receive federal and state welfare payments each month in varying amounts.

Wallace also noted SSI payments are a combination of federal old age assistance, aid to the blind, and partially and totally disabled compensation programs. SSI and welfare payments, he said, are paid only to persons living in a state-licensed practical nursing home such as Buena Vista.

Although the Buena Vista Home is classified as a practical nursing home, assistant director of the state Division of Health's nursing home office, James Conley, said the home does not qualify for state medicaid insurance for its patients. He explained the 100-year-old home does not meet specific life safety codes and "physical and environmental facilities" provisions required by the state.

To qualify for state medicaid insurance, a building "would almost have to be built specifically as a nursing home facility," Conley noted.

Conley further explained Buena Vista is inspected by a state sanitarium and a registered nurse "at least once a year," and licensed annually. The home, he said is classified as a practical nursing home because it does not provide "immediate medical care" for its patients.

Along with the home's new price structure, the social services board last October appointed Mrs. Jonell Smith as nursing home administrator, also was a nurse's aide for three years at Bothwell Hospital.

"We all worked hard to change the image of the home," Mrs. Smith said. "I had to change payroll schedules, meal planning procedures and much of the home's operation."

She explained food costs were cut by ordering supplies from more than one distributor. "I cut expenses by shopping around, and I think patients are now receiving good food, good nutrition and a well-balanced diet," Mrs. Smith said.

According to Mrs. Smith, changes at the Buena Vista Home have not been extensive. She indicated efforts are being made to increase planned entertainment activities and the home's storage room has been converted into a chapel. "The best we can do right now," she said, "is keep our patients warm, well-fed and comfortable."

Night courses are available

State Fair Community College, for the first time since opening its doors in 1968, will offer a variety of evening courses during the summer session for academic transfer and vocational-technical studies, according to Dr. Joyce Fielding, dean of student personnel.

Courses which will apply to an Associate of Arts degree, including public speaking, psychology, national government, art appreciation, algebra, and economics, will be offered. Vocational courses are being offered in the business and office departments, including mathematics, typing, business management, shorthand and office machines.

The summer session lasts eight weeks and students taking one three-hour course will be required to attend two nights per week from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m.

"We have more veterans attending SFCC this semester and this will give them the opportunity to continue receiving full educational benefits by attending school four nights a week," Dr. Fielding said.

Persons seeking more information on these courses are asked to contact the student personnel office at the college.

Tourists are discovering Guatemala

Business as usual — for now

The animated market, Thursdays and Sundays, at Chichicastenango, Guatemala, is still not disturbed by too many tourist throngs. But somehow tourists are getting to hear about Guatemala, and inevitably their influx is going to change the little Latin American country. At present there are two Guatemalas. One welcomes the tourist, however, unprepared the country is for the tourist's growing numbers; the other has yet to meet the boom head on — and reserves judgement on whether it wants to.

By MALCOLM N. CARTER
Associated Press Writer

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Somehow tourists hear of this Central American country and, inevitably, they are changing it.

Guatemala's tourist boom is taking its toll in the need for advance hotel reservations, in the difficulty of booking flights, and in the capricious government-run airline service to Tikal's Maya ruins.

Northernmost of the Central American republics, Guatemala is a land of scenic beauty. It was the home of Olmec and Mayan civilizations before Spanish conquerors came in 1523. Guatemala became independent in 1838.

Government figures show the 191,000 tourists who visited Guatemala in the first half of 1974 were 10 per cent more than the total number of tourists in all of 1970.

There is talk of 350-room hotels on the shores of Lake Atitlan — certain devastation of the serene mood its brooding volcanoes evoke.

More than half Guatemala's tourists last year came from neighboring Central American countries. About a quarter of the total came from the United States. Tourists also came from Mexico, South America, West Germany, France and Spain.

Tourists from different countries seldom meet except at the airport here any morning before 8 a.m. That is scheduled departure time for the government-owned Aviateca airlines flight to Tikal, 500 miles from Guatemala City. Tourists often arrive to find that their reservation for one of the 30 seats has been lost.

Until the last minute, travelers often are not certain whether they will be permitted to board the plane or even whether it will depart. On a recent attempt to reach Tikal, two Americans were assured by their travel agent that they had been placed on a priority waiting list.

At the airport, that claim was met with a shrug. The names were nowhere. Also hoping to make the day's lone flight were six visitors stranded by a cancellation the previous day. Twice they went to the airport — with reservations — and twice were told they could not go.

They never did.

Most tourists stay in Guatemala only a week, and missing that major archeological site is a disappointment.

It is also possible to get a commercial flight to Flores early in the afternoon and connect with a flight to Tikal. Most tourists fly directly to the ruins from Guatemala City, dine at picnic tables at a lodge deep in the rain forest, and catch a mid-afternoon plane back.

Remaining overnight at the lodge, primitive enough for the generator to shut off lights about 9:30 p.m., is the real joy. Staying longer provides time to explore more fully the ruins and to prowl the jungle at dusk and dawn spotting monkeys, peccary and irridescent wild turkeys.

Hardly an organized tour misses Tikal. Other usual stops are Antigua, the old Spanish capital; Lake Atitlan, and Chichicastenango, all within four hours by car from Guatemala City.

To the west in Panajachel, only three hotels — small ones at that, with 78 rooms among them — stand on Lake Atitlan. In the town, long-haired Americans flock to a hamburger joint and to a Chinese restaurant for cheap food.

Daily boat trips are the only way to reach some of the surrounding Indian pueblos, where inhabitants meet tourists with open palms.

"Peech, peech," the children shout at tourists, approximating English for "picture." They demand 25 centavos to be photographed, but accept less.

About an hour to the north, Chichicastenango's attraction is its market day on Thursdays and Sundays. Automobiles wind their way up to the village and enterprising boys show their drivers to parking spots.

The Mayan Inn is an institution there, and many tourists, having haggled their arms full of blazing bright textiles, eat a tasty lunch there amid tropical flowers and marimba music.

Most tourists never get further north or west, but the traveler who ventures by automobile beyond these well-trafficked routes is rewarded with overwhelming mountain vistas. The price he pays, however, is a kidney-jarring daredevil ride over dirt, mud and rock roads.

There are two Guatemalas. One has met tourists and welcomes them with outstretched palm — however unprepared that country is for the increasing numbers of tourists.

The other Guatemala has yet to meet the tourist boom head on, and reserves judgment whether it wants to.

Whichever tourists visit, they keep hearing that the time to travel here is now — five years from now, tourists will have spoiled it all.

And the said thing is, it's probably true.

Ancient splendor of Maya

Tikal's Maya ruins are one of Guatemala's big tourist attractions, a major archeological site set deep in the rain forest. Guatemala is having a tourist boom and there's hardly an organized tour that doesn't include Tikal — usually reached by means of a capricious local air service.

Want MKT depot preserved

Using the old Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad depot here received unanimous support from readers who responded to last Sunday's Democrat-Capital Survey. A total of 17 answers was received.

Readers were asked: "A group of local citizens has expressed interest in acquiring the old Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad depot on East Third for use as a possible museum and restaurant. As one of Sedalia's few remaining historic landmarks, do you favor efforts to preserve the building?"

A reader who asked not to be named wrote, "So many old landmarks have been torn down, I think this old depot should stay. It has a lot of good, also sad memories for people."

Another Sedalian wrote, "I think it would be a fine thing for Sedalia to buy the MK & T Depot for a museum. We need something like that. As a young girl, I liked to wander through the depot and enjoy its beauty, as it was then. Too many of our old landmarks are being destroyed."

William D. Impsey, no address given, said, "I am very glad to see some effort to preserve the historical landmarks in Sedalia. It would be a tragedy to see the beautiful MKT depot destroyed. There are also many large, pretty old homes in the northeast part of town, bordered by Broadway and Ohio. In many instances these houses have been well kept and really make Sedalia look like a city of comfortable, mellow neighborhoods for people...

"Unfortunately, many structurally sound, beautiful old homes are also being destroyed. I hope this practice stops soon for the sake of savings in energy, resources and the architecture that links us to Sedalia's heritage," the letter concluded.

One unsigned note said, "Sedalia has a railroad heritage — let's preserve this building."

And finally this response: "A restaurant, particularly for lunch, is badly needed."

DEMOCRAT- CAPITAL SURVEY

QUESTION — The Missouri House is debating a bill that would allow public employes to organize and bargain collectively. Pro-union forces say public employes should enjoy the same rights as those in the private sector, but critics of the bill say the public interest will be jeopardized. Do you favor such a bill?

WATERLOO, Ill. (AP)—Arleen E. Hick, 48, of Columbia, Ill., was killed Friday night in a head-on collison on Ill. 3 near here, Illinois State Police reported.

Officers said Mrs. Hick was the driver of a car that apparently crossed the centerline and hit a car driven by Billie Miller, 35, of Waterloo. Mrs. Miller was seriously injured, police said.

Hearings on plant recessed

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Federal hearings on the proposed $1.7 billion Union Electric Co. nuclear power plant near Fulton in Callaway County have been recessed until April 22.

In testimony before the Atomic Safety and Licensing Board here Friday, Dr. Jacob K. Frenkel said persons supporting the power plant should receive "psychiatric examinations."

But Frenkel, who submitted testimony concerning the dangers of radiation to persons around the plant, later admitted during cross-examination that his calculations were wrong and that the gloomy picture he painted concerning the problem of radioactivity-induced cancer was exaggerated by about 1,000 times.

After drawing sharp criticism from members of the licensing board, Frenkel said he would stand by his belief that it would endanger the residents of the area around the plant to add to the background radiation everyone now receives.

Frenkel said it would be necessary to study the effects of nuclear plants on the area around it after about 25 years to learn the truth in the matter.

A witness for Union Electric, Dr. Marvin Goldman of the University of California, testified that his experiments had indicated that animals were not affected by low-level radiation.

Under cross-examination Dr. Goldman admitted that his experiments were funded almost entirely by the old Atomic Energy Commission.

The proposed Union Electric plant has been opposed by a utility consumers group and environmentalists.

Request to ordain deaconess is a first in Anglican church

LONDON (AP) — Members of an Anglican church here have made history by asking their bishop to ordain Elsie Baker, a deaconess at the parish, to the all-male Anglican priesthood.

"It is the first time such a request has been made" in England, says the Rev. Paul Oestreicher, Miss Baker's vicar at the Church of the Ascension in south London.

The vicar and his bishop support the petition. But at the Church of England headquarters in Westminster a spokesman said, "This will have to wait. The General Synod is debating the ordination of women at its July meeting. Nothing can be done now."

Miss Baker, a silver-haired woman in her 60s, has been a deaconness for 33 years, including 8 years at the Church of the Ascension.

"I may conduct services, including baptisms and burials and assist at Communion," said the cleric. "But I may not preside at Communion and I may not say the prayers of consecration or pronounce the absolution. Civil law prevents me from conducting a marriage ceremony."

Miss Baker said she would describe herself as a feminist "in the sense that I feel women priests could bring into the church the femininity it has lacked over the centuries.

"I have felt a calling to be a priest for about 20 years, but I am not one to parade with a placard."

The church has 93 deaconesses in England and Miss Baker said she knows that 83 of them wish to be ordained priests.

The Suffragan Bishop of Woolwich, the Rt. Rev. David Sheppard, who received the petition, said he supports ordination of women and hopes the General Synod "will seek to do what is true and right rather than what is expedient."

The debate over ordination of women has shaken Anglican churches thoughout the world. Most of the 43 Anglican diocesan synods in England have said they see no theological objections.

In the United States, the Episcopal Church — an independent member of the world Anglican community — is still embroiled in a controversy over the ordination of 11 women by three retired bishops last summer.

Although the House of Bishops ruled the ordinations invalid, some of the women are serving as priests and a church board has set aside charges against the bishops.

In Anglican provinces overseas, only Hong Kong has acted without waiting for a decision in England and ordained four women.

A source close to the General Synod said he thinks the July meeting will decide in favor of women priests. But he said the synod will add "in a typical Church of England compromise that the moment is not expedient."

"If members of the synod are attacked for it they will fall back on the First Epistle of St. Paul to the Corinthians where the apostle says, 'All things are lawful unto me, but all things are not expedient,'" the source said.

S. America visit still on Kissinger's schedule

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger says he will visit South America this month but if he does, he'll have to repair erosion of his position by previous postponements.

Officials and diplomats acknowledge Kissinger has been busy with world problems, but many feel he has made it clear that Latin America is at the bottom of his priorities.

"He cannot keep postponing his trip indefinitely without ruining his 'New Dialogue,'" said one U.S. official.

In Washington, Kissinger said Friday, "In the next few weeks, I expect to visit a few Latin American countries, including Venezuela." He named no other countries in comments made at swearing-in ceremonies for the new U.S. ambassador to Venezuela, Harry W. Shlauderman.

The original plan was for Kissinger to come to Buenos Aires in January and then return in March for a foreign ministers' conference along the lines of a "New Dialogue" he had proclaimed with Latin America.

He never made it, and the March meeting was canceled because of angry reactions to the U.S. trade bill which excluded Venezuela and Ecuador from tariff benefits because they were members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Since then, newspapers have carried dozens of stories giving new dates for the visit.

The latest reports say that if Kissinger comes at all, he is likely to drop Chile and Peru from the itinerary, leaving Argentina, Brazil and Venezuela, with perhaps an hour in Uruguay.

The Argentina stopover is considered a key to the trip since Foreign Minister Alberto J. Vignes is one of the few supporters of Kissinger's "New Dialogue."

A high-level Argentine Foreign Ministry official said, "We've got the same folder of background briefing and requests which we dust off each time we get a top American visitor. We're thinking of having it mimeographed...."

Venezuelan leaders say they want to press Kissinger for more dynamic U.S.-Latin ties. Brazilian authorities have some commerce and energy questions to discuss.

Cuba will certainly come up, especially in Venezuela and Argentina, which want to normalize relations with Fidel Castro's government.

One problem for a Kissinger trip is security.

U.S. sources say that when Assistant Secretary of State William D. Rogers came here last month to advance the Kissinger visit, he asked Argentina's Vignes about security arrangements.

"What do you think of the security you have now?" Vignes reportedly asked.

Rogers, the story goes, looked around at a convoy of armored personnel carriers, sharpshooters with high-powered rifles and heavily plated limousines, and replied he thought it was fine.

Then Vignes said, "When the secretary comes, it will be five times this."

Grand jury in recess

Hearnes' tax worries are behind him

KANSAS CITY (AP) — An indefinite recess for a federal grand jury here signalled late Friday that former Gov. Warren E. Hearnes need not worry about the possibility of government charges pertaining to his 1968 income tax returns.

The statute of limitations on those returns expires Tuesday.

In a copyright story in this morning's edition, The Kansas City Star quoted Bert C. Hurn, U. S. attorney for western Missouri, as advising Hearnes that Hurn had talked by telephone with Justice Department officials in Washington and recommended there be no indictment in connection with the former governor's 1968 tax returns. "Betty (Hearnes' wife) and I are just tickled to death," the former governor told The Star. "It renews our faith in the judicial process."

A relative of Mrs. Hearnes at Paducah, Ky., called a local radio station Friday evening to report she had received a telephone call from Hearnes' wife. Mrs. Hearnes reportedly quoted Paul Anthony White, an assistant to Hurn, as giving the same assurance.

Hearnes' 1968 income tax returns were but one area examined by the grand jury during its three-year investigation. The probe touched initially on procedures for banking state funds and political contributions and, in recent months, turned to Hearnes' personal finances.

Hearnes, whose appearance before the grand jury beginning Wednesday was voluntary, quoted Hurn as assuring the former governor that if any possibility of indictments against Hearnes exists, it would arise only as a result of the current grand jury probe.

Under continuing news reports of the grand jury procedure here, Hearnes, who seeks a U. S. Senate seat, had charged the investigation was politically motivated. His lengthy appearance convinced him otherwise, he said.

The former governor, who served consecutive four-year terms from 1965-72, told newsmen he spent the final minutes of his appearance thanking members of the grand jury for their kindness to him and thanking Hurn and his staff for their courtesy and fair treatment.

Hurn has insisted the long probe was not an effort to "get" Hearnes or any individual, but to eliminate what he called an insidious system in which bankers and politicians exchange money and favors for the state's bank deposits.

Hearnes said the final round of questioning was devoted primarily to placement of the state's bank accounts—"the same old story over and over again."

On Friday, he said the grand jury persisted in asking why, as governor, he did not take action to transfer some of the state's bank accounts. Hearnes said he pointed out that an attorney general's opinion he requested in 1965 indicated the placement of state deposits was the responsibility of the state treasurer.

With each query about the bank accounts, he said, "I was asked whether I personally profited from the transaction. Every time I told them, 'No.'"

To his surprise, he said, he also was asked about any connections he may have had with 50 different firms, including real estate agencies, banks, insurance firms and factories. Hearnes said he told the grand jury he had had no dealings with any of the companies mentioned.

Old people understand the young

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Today's youth, who aren't supposed to trust anyone over 30, seem to have an ally in those over 60, believes a gerontology professor at the State University of New York at Buffalo.

Older Americans appear to be more tolerant of the younger generation than middle-aged persons or even those in their late 20s, says Dr. Abraham Monk, who collaborates with other members of the UB School of Social Work on studies of the attitudes of the aging.

He also believes the nation's senior citizens are beginning to recognize young people as their political and social allies. This is because the two groups farthest apart in age share certain common interests that bring them together, he points out.

Neither group plays much of a role in the "power structure," the sociologist notes, and both groups are looked upon by others as members of a "leisure class."

"Older Americans most likely to have kindred feelings about youth," he explains, "are those who have cultivated good relations with their own offspring, those who are pleased with the way their own lives have unfolded, and those who have the impression that today's youth are embracing their own ideals."

Monk adds that he suspects that elderly persons who have established a rapport with their own children, now grown, "may generalize these positive feelings and project them toward all, or most, youth."

Ask Bingham group to visit Arrow Rock site

(Democrat-Capital Service)

JEFFERSON CITY — State Sen. Ike Skelton, D-Lexington, and State Rep. James Smith, D-Marshall, have invited members of Bingham Drawings, Inc., to Arrow Rock to view the proposed site of the Bingham Museum and Visitor's Center at the Arrow Rock State Park.

The Bingham Drawings Inc. group was appointed by Gov. Christopher Bond to investigate the possibilities of purchasing and retaining the George Caleb Bingham drawings in Missouri and to consider proposed sites for their exhibition.

Sekelton and Smith both said they feel Arrow Rock should be chosen as the permanent home of Bingham's drawings because the artist lived there for eight years and considered Arrow Rock his favorite place. Funds have been requested from the Senate appropriations committee by Skelton to plan the construction of the building in Arrow Rock.

Skelton noted the master plan of the Missouri Department of Natural Resources for the Arrow Rock State Park includes a visitor's center near the park's Old Tavern. "The most appropriate place to house these invaluable Bingham treasures should be his home town of Arrow Rock, and that is what Representative Smith and I hope to explain to this group," he said.

No definite date has been set for the proposed visit, but Skelton suggested it be held in May or June.

Fighting government

Alexander Joseph, 39, a self-described polygamist is among a group of would-be homesteaders the government seeks to bar from land in Southern Utah. He is pictured outside the federal Courthouse in Salt Lake City, Utah earlier this week with two women who identify themselves as his wives. The government contends the land the homesteaders want is not for homesteading.

Business news

Connie's El Sombrero Restaurant, 1511 South Limit, this week re-opened under new management after it was forced to close in January when the previous owner, Connie Crouch, reportedly failed to pay a total of $7,029.51 in sales taxes.

The restaurant is now owned by Mexican Foods of Columbia, Inc., with Columbia realtor Frank Ham as president. The manager of the local restaurant is Tom Vance, who previously managed Nibo's and the Fireside restaurants here. Ham reportedly refinanced the business, thus allowing it to reopen. He has a similar restaurant in Columbia.

The common man's friend

A little red headed boy was born April 13, 1743,
The man who wrote the document
That set our nation free,
His name was Thomas Jefferson,
He ranked among the great,
Albemarle was his county
And Virginia was his state;
First elected to the lower house-
Of the Colonial legislature
This tall, youthful lawyer was-
A fighting statesman by nature,
Active in resisting Britain
A prominent part he played
In favor of the Continental Congress
And through him progress was made.
To this body was he elected
And there to prominence rose
As a writer of documents
And later, the one they chose
To write the Declaration of Independence
This very gifted man
Who had worked with many others
To formulate their plan (And he was one of the signers)
Seventeen seventy-six, in the spring,
Knowing full well the consequence
Its failure to them would bring.
In the fall he retired from Congress
And in his own state worked for new laws,
Then was one chosen for America's Commission
To carry on the nation's cause.
But now the war was over
And there was no longer a need,
For peace had come and from British rule
This country had been freed.
In 1783 he reentered Congress
And the following summer went With Franklin and Adams to make treaties
And the next year to France was sent
As American representative
And for five years abroad remained
Negotiating important treaties Through which prestige for the country was gained,
When he returned to America
He became Secretary of State,
At the close of Washington's second term
He was Anti-Federalist candidate.
Running for president against Adams
Jefferson suffered defeat
But losing out to Adams
Gave him the vice-president's seat.
His campaign in 1880
Against Burr was a bitter try.
Two Republican candidates
And the voting result was a tie,
But the House of Representatives Chose Jefferson who emphasized
His democratic ideas
And White House customs were revised;
His first administration
Marked a most important event,
'Twas the Louisiana Purchase,
For in order to prevent France from getting a foothold
In America he urged they buy
Land to the mouth of the Mississippi
And sent Robert Livingston to try;
But Napoleon met the offer
With one of his own, for he Offered to sell the entire Province,
Which was ratified in 1803,
Jefferson was reelected
In the year 1804,
Retired from office in 1809
And entered public life no more.
This brilliant man was ahead of his time,
Known was he as a staunch friend
Of the common man, a leader
On whom they could depend.
He performed a wonderful service
With the ideals he impressed
Upon government and society Through which the new country progressed;
So today as we turn history's pages
We can see how much we owe
To this man who helped build the foundation
On which a firm nation could grow.

Public is not eager for consumer agency

If the overwhelming majority of American consumers have their way, Congress will again shelve the idea of setting up a super consumer advocate in Washington.

Although the empowering legislation, "The Consumer Protection Agency Act of 1975," has been endorsed by an impressive 11-1 vote in the Senate's Government Operations Committee, American consumers, by a 75 per cent majority, are opposed to the creation of a new, independent consumer agency within the federal government — according, that is, to another of those ubiquitous public opinion surveys.

The survey found that only 13 per cent of consumers support the bill, which its proponents say would give consumers a larger voice in helping shape government decisions. Not only that, but more than half of the 13 per cent who initially favored such an agency changed their minds when told that the bill calls for the government to spend $60 million to set up and operate the new agency over the first three years.

One would have guessed otherwise from listening to the complaints of some consumer activists, but the survey found that the public is generally satisfied with the consumer protection efforts of existing government agencies. Almost eight out of 10 consumers feel they are being treated fairly by the government.

Thus given the choice between creating a new agency or making existing ones more effective, they strongly favored improving present agencies by 75 per cent to 13 per cent, as noted.

The survey also found that 27 per cent of consumers believe they are "almost always" treated fairly by business, while 59 per cent feel they are "usually" treated fairly. Thirteen per cent said they have been treated unfairly.

Yet even in cases in which people have been dissatisfied with some product or service, the survey showed that they believe the best places to go in order to get something done about it are the person or business they dealt with in the first place, the Better Business Bureau and the company that made the product or furnished the service.

Only 8 per cent of the public look to federal consumer agencies to correct unfair treatment.

Despite the constant din of criticism of American business and the all too frequent examples of businesses failing to perform as they should perform, there seems to be a notable absence of any popular groundswell in favor of enshrining the consumerism movement in its own agency in the national government. A TALE OF THREE TAILS

A conservative view

Forced integration compounds problem

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Almost 21 years after Brown v. Board of Education, the nation today is hearing many of the same warnings and protests that were heard then. Once again, a period of agonizing reappraisal is at hand.

Kilpatrick

On the statistical record, as the Commission on Civil Rights recently reported, the Supreme Court's landmark decision has been pretty well implemented. The 17 Southern and border states that were maintaining segregated public school systems in 1954 are not maintaining them now.

But on the whole record, has Brown produced net gain? Most observers, myself included, probably would answer without hesitation: Yes, on balance, black children educationally are better off now than they were then. Yet the court itself remarked long ago that the issues are complex and not readily resolved. Consider, if you will, a recent speech by James S. Coleman; and consider the matter of Kalamazoo.

No one ever would describe Coleman as "soft on integration." The University of Chicago professor is the principal author of the 1966 "Coleman Report," which defended court-ordered desegregation in terms of its benefits to poor black children. Coleman's view is that such children have a better chance of succeeding in school if they attend classes with culturally advantaged children.

Two weeks ago, Coleman spoke to the American Educational Research Association. In a major address, not widely reported, he reviewed new findings that indicate a different and gloomier aspect of the situation.

The phenomenon of "white flight" continues unabated. The effect is to undermine the very thesis of the early Coleman studies. Faced with court orders for racial reorganization of city schools, middle and upper-income white parents flee to the suburbs, taking their culturally advantaged children with them. They leave behind the lower-middle white families whose children are as culturally disadvantaged as the black children with whom they are forcibly merged.

This phenomenon was foreseen from the beginning, but in Coleman's view it never was sufficiently understood or anticipated. Federal judges relentlessly pursued what they took to be the principles of Brown. In the process, the courts have proved to be "probably the worst instrument of social policy" that could have been devised. Court-ordered desegregation, said Coleman, may serve in the long run "to separate whites and blacks more severely than before."

Kalamazoo provides a case study. A century ago, the city pioneered in providing free public high schools. There is substantial evidence that city officials never have pursued policies of either overt or covert segregation. But by 1971, because of neighborhood population patterns, some schools had become disproportionately black. A federal judge imposed a draconian decree.

The senior minister of a Kalamazoo church writes me: "This has been a sad four years for all of us, and for every hope for the city's future. We are now spending just over one million dollars per year on additional bus transportation and the attendant expenses alone. That cost, which buys us nothing in the way of education, will go on indefinitely. Something over 3,700 children — most of them white, affluent, and from families that care about education — have left the public school system... Our children are infinitely more racist than they ever were before this busing for racial balance program got started. And the black part of our population is now overwhelmingly against continuing with this sad experiment."

If court-ordered "racial balance" is not working — if such decrees are producing poorer schools at greater cost in money and in racial tensions — why not search for a better alternative? Professor Coleman provides respectable authority for the need; Kalamazoo offers a sad example of the need unmet.

Sturgis, Hunt deny they were in Dallas

By JACK ANDERSON with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — In secret testimony before the Rockefeller Commission, Watergate burglar Frank Sturgis has confessed that he was involved in several CIA assassination plots.

But he has emphatically denied charges that he was in Dallas on the day President Kennedy was shot or that he had anything to do with the Kennedy assassination.

Sturgis offered to take a lie detector test if the commission had any doubt that he was telling the truth. No polygraph test, however, was administered.

Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt, who was also called before the commission to answer the same charges, delivered similar denials that he was linked in any way to the tragic events in Dallas.

Questioned for two days by senior counsel Robert Olsen, Sturgis described assassination plots in Cuba, the Dominican Republic, Guatemala, Haiti and Panama. He had participated in the plotting against leaders, both high and low, in all these countries, he testified.

The conspirators included persons he knew to be connected with the CIA, he said. His own role had been limited to helping "set up" assassination attempts. He had never taken part in any actual murders, he swore.

All the assassination plots, he explained, had been aimed against foreign leaders, none against American citizens. Most of the attempts had failed, he said, although he was involved in the advance work that led to the successful assassination of Dictator Trujillo in the Dominican Republic.

Sturgis described Cuba as the "hub" of assassination schemes. He personally had participated in plots, he said, against several Cuban leaders from Fidel Castro on down. Sturgis had been one of Castro's commanders after the takeover of Havana. During this period, Sturgis claimed, he had reported to a CIA contact in the U.S. embassy.

The special commission, headed by Vice President Nelson Rockefeller, is examining "evidence" which allegedly links Sturgis and Hunt to the Kennedy assassination. The chief exhibit is a picture of two vagrants, resembling Sturgis and Hunt, who were picked up in Dallas after the assassination.

Upon close examination, the picture of the man who is supposed to be Sturgis does not resemble him in some important details. The relative height of the two men in the picture also doesn't correspond to the actual height of Sturgis and Hunt.

Nevertheless, Counsel Olsen cross-examined Sturgis closely about the Kennedy assassination. Had Sturgis ever been in Dallas, Olsen asked. Yes, Sturgis acknowledged, "several times."

Had he been there on the day of the assassination, asked Olsen. No, said Sturgis, he had spent the day at his home in Miami. As witnesses, his wife, nephew and mother-in-law could place him in Miami on that day, he testified.

Had he gone to Dallas on the day before or after the assassination, Olsen demanded. Sturgis replied with a flat "No."

Had he ever visited the assassination site, Olsen pressed. Again Sturgis said he had not. Then he offered to take a lie detector test and answer questions about both the Kennedy assassination and his involvement in CIA assassination plots.

Sturgis also denied that he had anything to do with the assassinations of Robert Kennedy or Martin Luther King. He was questioned, too, about reports that the Watergate burglars had broken into the Chilean embassy in Washington. Sturgis denied that he had ever participated in the burglary of the Washington embassy.

PENTAGON PREDICTION: The Joint Chiefs expected President Nguyen Van Thieu to lose South Vietnam all along, although the great retreat was more sudden and spectacular than they had anticipated.

As far back as Feb. 1, 1972, we reported: "The secret estimate of the Joint Chiefs is that the ceasefire will break down and the Communists ultimately will gain control of all Vietnam.

"This would mean ... that nine years of American dying have been in vain. For the U.S. Government has spilled the blood of 55,000 American boys and squandered $150 billion to prevent a Communist takeover of South Vietnam.

"One intelligence analysis suggests that a sporadic ceasefire, at least, should endure for several months ... But once the Communist infrastructure has been rebuilt in the South, warns the analysis, the Communists will seek to end their long struggle for control of all Vietnam with a final military offensive.

"Secretly, the Joint Chiefs don't believe President Thieu can survive. He is preparing for the political ravages by tightening his military control over the country. This will make his regime even more unpopular with the people and, therfore, more vulnerable to Communist agitation.

"After Thieu has been weakened politically, Hanoi presumably will try to finish him off ... The Joint Chiefs have grave doubts about the South Vietnamese army's ability to repel an offensive without massive American air and artillery support."

The Joint Chiefs more than two years ago predicted almost precisely what is happening.

Jimmy Carter courts the presidency

By CYRENE DEAR

WASHINGTON — Jimmy Carter, former governor of Georgia, wants to be president of the United States. He told that to a room full of members and guests of the Woman's National Democratic Club recently.

"I want to give my best to my country because my country needs the best each of us can give. I think the American people want to trust their government and therefore they must trust their president," he said. "I am a peanut farmer, a former naval officer, an engineer, a Christian and a former governor. I am also a father of three sons and finally my wife Rosalynn and I had a baby daughter after 21 years of marriage. She is now seven years old, goes to an integrated public school and has a black teacher.

"I learned a lot being governor of Georgia, but I had some preparation for the job. I had been school board chairman, community leader and served in the state senate. Many of the things I accomplished in Georgia can be done in our national government such as opening meetings to the public, reduce the number of bureaucratic agencies, create zero-based budgeting which will assess priorities where they are needed most, broaden our agricultural, transportation and energy policies. As governor I learned that peoples' programs can work in education, conservation and pollution control, industrial development, judicial and penal reform, consumer protection and mental health care. I fought opposition from lobbyists and special interests by bringing tight business management to government.

"As I travel about this country and the world I find that people want and expect leadership from the United States. They want peace. There is no peace. This is difficult for a politician to answer. Do the American people want to continue to build nuclear weapons? Do the American people want to build secret weapons to kill other people? I don't think so. I believe that government should act according to the wishes of the American people. Only the United States can be a leader, but we no longer are. Even the less developed countries are against us.

"In Vietnam we have damaged our nation's consciousness. We are responsible for much of the suffering which we should share in relieving. If we withdraw all our aid we may cause more carnage, but we should get out as fast as we can.

"On the Middle East, the U.S. should spell out its commitment and continue to recognize Israel as a nation, but it in turn should recognize Palestine."

In his campaign for the presidency, Jimm Carter says, "I will enter every primary. I will continue to visit every state and go out to beat anyone who challenges me. I will talk to people wherever I go and try to convince the American people that there can be integrity in government and that our government can be competent to deal with our changeable opportunities. In our bicentennial year, it is right that we return to the principles on which this nation was founded. It is right that we have a government that serves instead of uses."

Carter was introduced to the club by newsman Martin Agronsky, who referred to the candidate not only as a prosperous peanut vendor, but as an admirer of the theologian philosopher Reinhold Niebuhr, the folk singer Bob Dylan, and the poet Dylan Thomas. His real hero, under whom he served in World War II, is Admiral Hyman Rickover, who always demanded the best.

Jimmy Carter's campaign slogan is, "For America's third century, why not our best? Elect Jimmy Carter President."

'No frills' only way to fly

WASHINGTON — The "no frills" airline fare is going into effect. National Airlines has just received permission to sell tickets on their planes for 35 per cent less. Other airlines are expected to follow.

Buchwald

All the passenger would get on the plane would be a seat. He would have to bring his own food, his own drink and provide his own Wash N' Dry towelettes.

It's quite possible that the "no frills" part of the aircraft could not only be the most economical but the most fun as well.

I can see the scene.

Fifty people are seated in the back of the plane without so much as a stewardess in sight.

Each of them has a picnic basket or a box lunch on his lap.

As soon as the plane gets in the air one of the passengers yells, "Does anybody want to trade a chicken salad with lettuce for a corned beef sandwich on rye?"

A man in the back says, "I'll give you a bacon, lettuce and tomato for the chicken salad and throw in a hardboiled egg."

His wife says, "I worked all morning to make the bacon, lettuce and tomato sandwiches. How could you trade them for chicken salad?"

"I'll give you my corned beef sandwich," a man yells, "for the chicken salad plus three brownies, and I can keep my pickle."

"Done," says the man with the chicken salad.

A couple set up a hibachi stove in the aisle and started to barbecue spareribs.

"Hey," says a man sitting across from them. "Are you sure you're allowed to barbecue ribs on the plane?"

The lady who was putting the barbecue sauce on the ribs says, "There's nothing in the ticket that says you can't cook your own meals in the 'no frills' section of the plane."

"Well, in that case," replies the man taking a sword out of his briefcase, "I'm going to have some shashlik."

The odors of the cooking start to permeate the cabin. A lady preparing a cheese fondue on the seat next to her asks the lady in front if she can borrow a cup of oil.

The lady gives her the oil in exchange for some sugar which she needs of her pancake batter.

By this time the passengers in tourist and first class smell all the food. An angry first-class passenger who has wandered into the "no frills" cabin by mistake comes storming back and says to the stewardess, "How come they're eating shashlik back there and we're eating this glop which you call chicken?"

"It's quite simple. If you have a 'no frills' ticket, you don't get the airline's food."

"If we have to eat your food, we're the ones who should get 35 per cent off," the first-class passenger says.

By this time all the passengers in the "no frills" cabin have finished their meals.

"What do we do for entertainment?" someone asks.

"I've got some great home movies of a trip we took to Greece," a man says.

"Great, let's see them," a lady says. "Then my son will play the guitar for you."

"We could have some singing afterwards."

"I have a bingo game if anybody wants to play."

A barrel of beer that one of the passengers had brought on board is opened and paper hats are passed out by a party-favor salesman.

Several of the first-class and tourist passengers try to get back in the "no frills" section but they are stopped at the curtain by the stewardess who tells them sternly, "Go back to your seats, or I won't give you any coffee, tea or milk."

Ely Culbertson once said that any time he could see all the cards, the Culbertson system would get him to the right contract.

Five clubs would be the right contract for today's hand. South would make it easily by winning the first heart, drawing trumps and knocking out the ace of diamonds.

When this hand appeared in the finals of a regional open pairs no one reached that contract. Those few pairs that did get to game all played in three notrump and most of them wound up making their contract.

It didn't require any great skill on their part. West opened the king of hearts and continued with the queen after South ducked. Then he led a third heart to clear the suit. South would run off six clubs, finally lead a diamond and be home free since East held that ace.

The one South who went down for a nice fat goose egg on the score was the victim of really fine defense. West did open the king of hearts, but shifted to a low heart at trick two.

This put East in the lead and East led the four of spades.

South ducked that to West's queen. A spade came back and East was careful to hold back his king so that all South could do was to run with his eight tricks and give up.

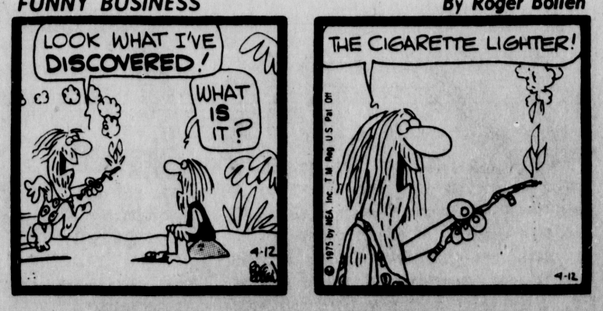
FUNNY BUSINESS

By Roger Bollen



Detente good between space explorers of U.S., U.S.S.R.

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

Five spacemen — three American, two Russian — sipped from a bottle of vodka. They recorked it, signed their names to the label and vowed to finish it when they return from a joint space flight in July.

They drank to the continued success of their preparations. To toast the success of the flight itself might bring bad luck, they said.

The spacemen were in the apartment of Col. Alexi Leonov in Star City, home of the cosmonauts, near Moscow. The table was piled high with food.

Camaraderie abounded, just as it has when the five have met during the last two years to train for the first international space mission — a linkup between American and Soviet spaceships 140 miles above the earth.

They are a diverse group, blended into a smoothly working team by months of training in Russia, at Cape Canaveral, Fla., and at the Johnson Space Center in Houston, Tex.

There's 40-year-old Leonov, who 10 years ago became the first man to walk in space. He's an extrovert, hooked on flying at age 10 when he saw a movie about Soviet military pilots.

His flight engineer is Valeri Kubasov, also 40, veteran of the 1969 Soyuz 6 flight. A brilliant mechanical engineer, he is reserved and quiet — "the kind of guy who sits back and cools it."

Commanding the American crew is Air Force Brig. Gen. Thomas P. Stafford, 44, who has flown three space missions, including one trip around the moon. He breaks up Leonov when he speaks Russian with his Oklahoma twang.

Vance D. Brand, 44, is command module pilot. He's an aeronautical engineer and former test pilot making his first space trip.

Rounding out the team is the "old man," Donald K. "Deke" Slayton, 51, the only one of the original seven Mercury astronauts still in the space program and the only one who never flew in space.

Grounded by an unusual heart condition, he helped train crew after crew for space flight until he finally was declared fit for space himself.

Detente is flourishing on this project after an uneven beginning. Two years ago, the project was announced after three years of negotiations. It was greeted with some suspicion by American astronauts, mostly former military pilots trained to think of Russians as potential enemies. Some engineers worried the United States would give away superior space technology to the Soviets.

The worry evaporated as Americans and Russians — spacemen, engineers, technicians, scientists, interpreters and managers — learned to trust and respect one another. They say they are dedicated to successful conclusion of the July flight and they hope it will lead to future joint missions in large space stations, and perhaps trips to the planets.

Above all, they profess a deep desire for lasting friendship between two nations.

A Soviet engineer expressed it last year during a visit to a Texas ranch where everyone donned 10-gallon hats.

"Once you put on a cowboy hat, everybody is almost alike," he said. "You can't tell a Russian from an American." The same thing happens, they found, when you put on a space suit.

More than 100 Russians and Americans have regularly held working meetings alternately in each country to plan the joint flight, which begins July 15. Spacemen and flight directors have familiarized themselves with each other's spacecraft operations and a new, compatible docking system has been designed.

Tests to qualify equipment and assure safety have been conducted: a complex flight plan developed and an intricate rendezvous and docking sequence has been worked out.

For the first time, Russians will see live coverage throughout the flight, adding a new public dimension to the Soviet space program.

The Russian Soyus spaceship and the larger American Apollo will link up two days after each craft is launched from its home country. The ships will remain docked for two days and the Russian Soyuz will land on the sixth day of flight. The Apollo will come down four days later.

Astronaut Eugene Cernan, who commanded the Apollo 17 moon landing mission, says the American lifestyle has surprised visiting Russians.

"They came to Houston, and they see that we have two cars; we've got a nice house ... If we want to go someplace we buy an airplane ticket. These people were brought up under a society where all that's restricted."

Cernan says the Russians and Americans have done a lot of things together: gotten smashed, been in the sauna, played tennis, attended official functions, and gone sightseeing in both countries.

Leonov, in an interview, said he found the American people to be much different than he had visualized.

"We have been able to meet just simple people and also people in the upper level of society with their big jobs," he said. "You get the impression these people are simple in their relations among themselves and with us. We have built some lasting friendships with our colleagues here."

Kubasov said, "Everywhere we have been, all the meetings, all the receptions were very pleasant. If we continue to live with this friendliness it will benefit all of us.

"Just like you, I want my children to sleep — peacefully and calmly."

Stafford, the American commander, recalled some memorable dinners in the cosmonauts' apartments.

"The cosmonauts' wives prepare lavish feasts, loading the table," he said. "They'll squeeze 12 to 14 or 20 people in. We drink many toasts during the meal, to our families, our thoughts and the reasons we're there. We've adopted this custom when they come to our homes."

The Russians and their technical director, Prof. Konstantin D. Bushuyev of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, came into the project recognizing the technical achievement of the Americans, who had sent 12 men to the moon.

"I don't think they had an appreciation of their own capabilities," said Christopher C. Kraft, director of the Johnson Space Center.

He said Americans had to help the Russians grasp the things needed to develop space hardware to make an operational flight involving two countries possible.

"We've transferred very, very little technology in the time we've been working with them," Kraft said. "If they have learned anything, it's in the world of management."

A special relationship developed between Bushuyev and the American technical director, Dr. Glynn Lunney. To them fell the job of reaching compromise when necessary.

"There were constraints and difficulties that we could only dimly foresee at the beginning," he said. "We would find problems in areas that surprised us."

Lunney said language was difficult at first, "But we've learned to use interpreters. An interpreter actually helps a meeting because it gives you a little time to think as he translates. You tend to be concise and don't ramble so much."

Astronauts who will fly the mission have had 700 hours of Russian language instruction, and the cosmonauts have had comparable training in English. When the ships are docked in space, the plans call for Americans to speak Russian and the cosmonauts to speak English.

"Language is no problem," cosmonaut Leonov told an interviewer in perfect English.

He feels the July mission may lead to future joint efforts, to international space stations and perhaps, in the future, to trips to the planets.

Chester M. Lee, Apollo-Soyuz director of NASA headquarters, says the mission is not simply a liftoff and handshake in the sky.

"Just getting two control centers thousands of miles apart to understand and communicate, plus actual conduct of the flight, will be invaluable experience in the future.

"We will learn lessons from this flight that will save time and money in future similar efforts. Space is going to be explored. It's man's inherent nature to do that, and we might as well do it together."

Simmons triggers late Cardinal rally

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Ted Simmons triggered a three-run rally with a run-scoring single in the second inning and then knocked in the go-ahead run with another base hit in the ninth, leading the St. Louis Cardinals to a 7-5 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies Saturday.

After the Phillies tied the game 5-5 in the seventh, the Cardinals rallied in the ninth as Ted Sizemore opened with a single and moved to second on a sacrifice bunt by Bake McBride. Reggie Smith was then walked intentionally before Simmons' single gave the Cardinals a 6-5 lead. A bouncer by Keith Hernandez later produced the Cardinals' seventh run.

The Phillies tied the score in the seventh on a run-scoring single by pinch hitter Tony Taylor. Willie Montanez triggered the rally with a single, moved to second on Greg Luzinski's base hit and rode home on Taylor's single off Cardinal starter Bib Gibson.

The Cardinals took a 3-0 lead in the second off Philadelphia starter Steve Carlton. Smith opened the rally with a triple and scored on Simmon's single. Sacrifice flies by Ed Brinkman and Gibson produced two more runs for St. Louis.

The Cardinals added a run in the fourth on Ken Reitz' RBI single before the Phillies came up with four of their own.

Chicago 6, Montreal 3

CHICAGO (AP) — Jerry Morales' two-run single keyed a four-run rally in the eighth inning that carried the Chicago Cubs to a 6-3 victory over the Montreal Expos Saturday.

The Cubs staged their comeback off Dale Murray, who relieved Montreal starter Dave McNally.

After Jose Cardenal walked, Bill Madlock sent the runner to third with a single to center. Rick Monday doubled to left center, chasing home Cardenal to tie the score at 3-3. Morales then singled to center to score Madlock and Monday with the winning runs and later scored the fourth run of the rally on an infield error.

Atlanta 7, San Francisco 4

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Darrell Evans belted a three-run homer and the Atlanta Braves broke a 4-4 tie on an error and a wild pitch in the fifth inning to beat the San Francisco Giants 7-4 Saturday.

Ralph Garr started the winning rally with an infield single and Marty Perez walked, chasing loser John D'Aquisto, 0-1.

With one out, Mike Lum was safe on a fielder's choice and Garr scored the go-ahead run when first baseman Gary Thomasson threw wildly trying to force Perez at second. Perez eventually scored on Charlie Williams' wild pitch to give the Braves an insurmountable 6-' lead.

Houston 7, Los Angeles 5

HOUSTON (AP) — Cliff Johnson's two-run homer touched off a five-run rally against Juan Marichal in the fourth inning, and the Houston Astros stopped the Los Angeles Dodgers 7-5 Saturday night.

Marichal, making his first start as a Dodger, took a one-hitter and a 2-0 lead into the fourth inning. A walk and Johnson's first homer of the year evened the score.

A walk to Jose Cruz kept the rally going. A balk and Doug Rader's single put Houston ahead, 3-2. Then Roger Metzger singled home one run and Enos Cabell doubled home another.

Houston pulled ahead 7-5 in the seventh as Rob Andrews singled and scored on Milt May's double.

Jefferson City sweeps doubleheader from Tigers

(Democrat-Capital Service)

JEFFERSON CITY — Sedalia Smith-Cotton ran into a hot Jefferson City Jay team Friday and took it on the chin twice in Central Missouri Conference baseball play.

The Jays beat the Tigers 11-0 in an abbreviated five-inning opener, then came back to win the nightcap 5-0.

The losses once again drop the Tigers below the .500 mark in both conference (2-4) and overall (4-6) play.

In the opener, the Jays bunched seven singles around five walks and three S-C errors to back the two-hit pitching of Jerry Meck.

After tallying a single marker in the third, Jefferson City scored four more in the second inning on the basis of two walks, a hit batsman, a single, four wild pitches and a passed ball.

The losing hurler for Smith-Cotton was Mark Thomason.

If the Tigers had any hopes of running into an easier hurler in the nightcap, they were quickly dashed by Mike Pfautsch, who struck out four in the first two innings and 13 in the game en route to a four-hit shutout.

Again, the Jays took advantage of S-C mistakes, posting five runs on only four hits. Twelve Jefferson City batters reached base, however, via nine walks and three errors.

Shortstop Mike Merrick of Jefferson City collected two hits in each game. No Smith-Cotton player hit safely more than once.

The losing hurler in the nightcap was Greg Bechtel.

The Tigers next foe is Sweet Springs Tuesday at Liberty Park.

Roadrunners square record with 9-3 win over Linn Tech

The State Fair Community College baseball team evened its record at 6-6 with a 9-3 win over Linn Tech Saturday.

The Roadrunners, down 3-2 going into the bottom of the fifth, scored seven times in the frame and added another in the sixth.

The winning pitcher was Greg Gouch, who relieved Roger Reed. Gerald Tucker was the losing hurler.

In the first game, St. Paul's College of Concordia downed Linn Tech 6-4.

The Roadrunners face St. Paul's at 1 p.m. today at Liberty Park and journey to Highland, Kan., Monday for a conference doubleheader against Highland Junior College.

Hal McRae beats Twins with single

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Hal McRae singled home the winning run in the 10th inning, lifting the Kansas City Royals to a 2-1 victory over the Minnesota Twins Saturday.

Freddie Patek beat out an infield hit and moved to third on John Mayberry's one-out single before McRae's winning hit against loser Bill Campbell, 0-1.

Minnesota scored against Nelson Briles in the first when Lyman Bostock beat out a grounder behind second. Cookie Rojas backhanded the ball and flipped to Patek, but the little shortstop threw past first base for an error. Steve Braun's ground ball moved Bostock to third and Briles wild-pitched him home.

Oakland 5, Texas 4

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — Oakland's Vida Blue and Rollie Fingers teamed on a three-hitter, and Sal Bando and Billy Williams hit home runs for the A's in a nationally televised 5-4 victory over the Texas Rangers Saturday.

Jenkins was treated roughly by the hard-hitting A's. He beat them five times in five outings last year but surrendered 10 hits Saturday in seven innings en route to his second loss of the year.

Boston 3, Baltimore 2

BALTIMORE (AP) — Doug Griffin's run-scoring single in the 13th inning gave the Boston Red Sox a 3-2 victory over the Baltimore Orioles Saturday.

Bob Montgomery started the 13th with a walk off Baltimore reliever Jesse Jefferson. Jim Rice sacrificed pinch runner Rick Miller to second and, after Rick Burleson walked, Miller raced home on Griffin's single to center.

Dwight Evans tied the game at 2-2 for Boston and sent it into extra innings when he belted his first home run of the season with one out in the ninth off starter Ross Grimsley.

Milwaukee 6, Cleveland 5

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Charlie Moore's two-run double capped a four-run first inning and Robin Yount and Six-to Lezcano belted solo home runs to lead the Milwaukee Brewers past the Cleveland Indians 6-5 Saturday.

Boog Powell drove in three runs for Cleveland with his second and third home runs of the season, and George Hendrick added a leadoff homer in the ninth.

A walk to John Briggs, Hank Aaron's double and an intentional walk to George Scott loaded the bases for the Brewers against lefty Fritz Peterson in the first.

Don Money beat out and infield hit to score one run, Lezcano doubled in another and Moore followed with his two-run double.

Detroit 7, New York 2

NEW YORK (AP) — Nate Colbert's grand-slam home run and Bill Freehan's solo blast highlighted a seven-run seventh inning that carried the Detroit Tigers to a 7-2 victory over the New York Yankees Saturday.

California 4, Chicago 3

ANAHEIM (AP) — Leroy Stanton belted a one-out home run into the left field bullpen in the 10th inning to give the California Angels a 4-3 victory Saturday over the Chicago White Sox.

Stanton's home run came off Chicago lefty Wilbur Wood and made a winner out of Andy Hassler.

The Angels tied the game 3-3 in the seventh when Morris Nettles singled, stole second and scored on Tommy Harper's two-out single to left.

by vaughn hart
sports editor

Wouldn't it be nice to send your children to a school that was built with revenue where you, the taxpayer, didn't have to foot your share of the bill?

Wouldn't it be nice to have the use of superhighways that were constructed with money that didn't come out of your pocket?

Impossible you say? Not so, say I.

You ask, where would the money come from? Pari-mutuel betting, say I.

The 1974 "Sports Almanac," produced by the Associated Press says, "...Today, more than 100 tracks hold meets in the 30 American states where horse racing is legal. Nearly 50 million people pay their way for the privilege of betting close to four billion dollars annually on the races. Add this to the legalized off-track betting that is now an important means of revenue to local communities around the country, and suddenly the betting dollars climb to astronomical sums."

Needless to say, Missouri doesn't fall into the catagory where betting is legal, although a number of harness and quarter horse races are held within its boundaries.

Something's going to have to give. Few if any of us want our taxes increased — property, gasoline, sales — to mention just a few. Few if any of us want to see new taxes initiated either by the city, state or by Uncle Sam.

However, with costs increasing almost daily, it's obvious that either tax revenues have to be increased or some programs have to be dropped.

To some, legalized betting is morally wrong. To many others, 50 million stron so says the Associated Press, want to participate.

Oddly enough, pari-mutuel betting is something that can benefit everyone in the respective states in which it's legal. You don't have to pay the price, so to speak, to share the benefits.

There must be something about the sport of horse racing itself. It's the biggest drawing card, crowd-wise, of all sports. It's a year-round activity. Even northern states that have legalized pari-mutuel tracks run nine and 10-month programs.

Basic theory tells us that if the spectator appeal is there, tracks are going to be open as long as possible, despite the weather. The longer a season runs, the more people it draws. The more people who attend, the more they wager.

And finally, the more money wagered, the more the states, communities and citizens benefit.

Various horse racing enthusiasts, including the Sedalia-based All Breed Missouri Horse Racing Association, have been and still are kicking around the idea of legalized betting in the state.

One member of the group, Jack Couts, mentioned a few days ago about possibly setting aside some money for literature to help inform the citizens of Missouri on the benefits of pari-mutuel betting.

This is good, but a much more clearly defined program of how the revenues are going to be spent must be drawn up before anything definite is presented to either the legislature or to the taxpayers via petition.

For example, a certain percentage of the money that goes back to the state must be set aside for schools. A certain percentage must be used for highway improvement. A certain percentage must be set aside to be returned to the general revenues of the cities and counties where tracks are located.

Above all, to function properly, pari-mutuel betting must be policed to insure that everything is above board.

The most pitiful part of this matter is to watch Missouri money crossing the state lines of Nebraska and Illinois. This is potential revenue that Missouri is losing to its neighbors. It's easy to see that Missouri money is helping build schools and roads in these states rather than at home.

Part V: In search of talent

Prep stars adjust to pressure

WASHINGTON (AP) — Al Dutch, at 6-feet-7 and 200 pounds, is a college basketball coach's dream—talented on the court and in the classroom as well.

The Carroll High School senior, one of the top prep players in the country and ranked in the top half of his class scholastically, plays his whole game facing the basket, dribbling between his legs and shooting from beyond 20 feet to get his 25.7 points a game.

"Al's working on his 50-foot jumper for when he goes up against those 7-footers in college," said Dutch's coach, Bill Barnes, shaking his head. "And I remember when it was a big deal to be able to dunk.

"There's not a whole lot you have to say about a player of Al's ability," said Barnes. "He's just a tremendous athlete who does everything on and off the basketball court. I call him my thoroughbred."

Because of his talent, Dutch probably was the most sought after youngster in the player-rich Washington area, and thus one of the most sought-after in the country. He and others like him have been the objects of the highly-pressurized world of college recruiting.

Although it appeared Notre Dame had the inside track on him, Dutch decided two weeks ago to stay home and attend Georgetown University.

The decision was typical of Dutch, who scored 1,920 points in his four years at Carroll. "Al looked over the situation there (Georgetown) and he feels confident he will play," said Barnes. "Personally, I think they'll hold a spot open for him. He's an outstanding prospect, no doubt about it."

In choosing Georgetown, Dutch turned down a trip to the University of Hawaii, as well as visits to other campuses around the country at the expense of colleges who sought his talents.

Before making his decision, Dutch told the Associated Press he had not been put under pressure by college recruiters. He conceded, however, that he had been contacted by so many that it would have been easier to name the schools that didn't seek him out.

Dutch, who has dealt with recruiters since he was a sophomore, also said that none of the colleges which contacted him made any illegal or unsavory offers.

Dutch's experience is like many of the nation's top scholastic basketball players, although many of them admit that the pressures from recruiting caused them to announce early the college of their choice.

Nearly all the players interviewed by The AP said they had not been given an illegal offer, such as extra cash, new clothes, a new car or a job for their parents, to attend a certain college. One said there were such offers and some hinted that illegal offers had been made. They refused to identify the persons or schools who made them.

The recruiting pressure on this year's high school seniors is not only coming from the colleges, but also from the pros, which successfully gained last year's top prep player, Moses Malone of Petersburg, Va., who signed with the American Basketball Association.

This year's top player, Bill Cartwright of Elk City, Calif., announced in January that he would attend the University of San Francisco, making the early decision to stem the mounting pressure from recruiters.

Cartwright, who follows the career of Malone religiously although he has never met him, was asked if he thought about jumping to the pros.

"If they offer you a big sum of money, you almost have to consider it," he replied. "But, of course, that hasn't happened yet."

Cartwright's coach, Dan Risley, said: "It will be a tough decision if Billy goes right to the pros or not. I've heard that the American Basketball Association is going to draft him. I think he might choose to go to college, though, because he wants to lead a team to a national championship."

Two others sought by the pros as well as the colleges are Darryl Dawkins of Orlando, Fla., who is said to be leaning toward a school in his home state, and Bill "Poodles" Willoughby of Englewood, N.J., who has signed a grant-in-aid with the University of Kentucky and now says he is not interested in a pro contract.

Another top prep star, Bob Bender of Bloomington, Ill., said he had been contacted by some 375 schools. "I haven't had a bad experience with recruiting," said Bender. "I can be totally honest—I haven't had anybody approach me in an illegal manner."

Bender said he visited eight campuses last fall and expected to visit at least four more. The three he said he liked are N.C. State, Kansas and Indiana, and early this past week he signed at Indiana.

Not all the schoolboys, however, are quick to say that they have not been approached and offered deals which allegedly violate NCAA rules and regulations.

Clint Richardson, of O'Dea High School in Seattle, said he used to read about the under-the-table offers by college recruiters. Now he has had them first hand.

Richardson, who averaged over 30 points per game, said recruiters mentioned money and free cars in efforts to get him to enroll at their schools. In order to end the pressure, Richardson announced in February that he would stay home and attend Seattle.

"We'll get you some wheels so you won't have to walk anymore," Richardson quoted some of the recruiters as saying. "We'll take care of you—you'll get more than you're supposed to get (under a scholarship)."

Richardson also said many schools used women in their recruiting. He said there often were times—and they weren't very coincidental—when an attractive coed would materialize when he was on a campus tour.

"They would have it so the players would tell me, 'She's easy,'" he said.

NHL quarterfinals start today

Shero doesn't like one-week layoff

Associated Press

Elsewhere, the Chicago Black Hawks visit the Buffalo Sabres in a nationally televised contest, the New York Islanders meet the Pittsburgh Penguins, and the Vancouver Canucks take on the Montreal Canadiens as the best-of-seven quarter-final series get under way.

The Flyers admit worry over being stale after the recess. "I don't like it," says center Bobby Clarke. "It's a way to get rested, but it's hard to stay sharp."

"I don't know if it's good," said defenseman Andre Dupont. "It might be good because you won't feel as tired mentally. But the attitude will be different and shape-wise it will be tough. Practice can't be the same as a game."

So there may be some early stiffness in the Flyers' game as they open against a surprising Toronto team. The Maple Leafs, written off after a 3-2 overtime loss to the Kings in their first-round opener, came back for a 3-2 overtime victoy Thursday night and a 2-1 decision Friday to eliminate Los Angeles.

The Philadelphia Flyers,still pondering the advantages of a one-week layoff, open defense of their Stanley Cup championship against the Toronto Maple Leafs tonight.

"I don't like having so much time off," says Coach Fred Shero, who then thought back to the last time a team he coached had a playoff bye. The Flyers earned a pass into the quarter-finals by winning the Division 1 crown.

"When I was coaching at Omaha years ago, nobody could figure out how to keep the players sharp," Shero said. "So we decided to invite all the kids in the city for free and we played an intra-squad game at our arena.

"Each side put up a little money to keep it interesting, the crowd was there, and it worked out pretty well."

Shero repeated the idea last week as his Flyers enjoyed their bye. He'll find out tonight if the brainstorm worked, when his players skate for real against Toronto.

The Black Hawks earned the right to meet Buffalo by disposing of the Boston Bruins in Friday night's third and deciding first-round game.

Tony Esposito, blasted 8-2 in Tuesday night's opener, settled down to win Thursday night and made 52 stops in Friday night's triumph.

Desire and hard work got the third-year Islanders past the New York Rangers in their first playoff appearance. Except for a second-game 8-3 loss, the Islanders goaltending was razor sharp, and in that contest the defense was shaky. The Penguins, meanwhile, swept past the St. Louis Blues to advance in the playoff competition.

Vancouver, the only division champion without a quarter-final home-ice advantage, travels to Montreal to face a club picked by most as the favorite for this year's National Hockey League championship. Their matchup also provides the only clash between sectional champs: the Candians won Division 3, and the Canucks took Division 2.

McNeill thinking 'Love'

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Larry McNeill is working on ways to outthink and outfeint Bob Love when the Chicago Bulls and the Kansas City Kings resume their Western Conference semifinal playoff in the NBA at Kansas City on Sunday.

Love scored 38 points for the Bulls in the opening game of their best-of-seven series in Chicago, with the Bulls beating the Kings 95-89.

The second game is at 1:30 p.m. (EDT) in Kansas City's new Kemper arena.

They will square off again in Chicago on Wednesday night and return to Kansas City for the fourth game on Friday night.

Despite Love's 38 points at Chicago, McNeill still thinks there are ways to shut him down if not off.

"It was more a case of him being hot," said the second-year pro from Marquette. "The best way to guard him is to put a hand straight in front of him and get it over the ball, but it's dangerous if you are in foul trouble."

McNeill got into foul trouble at Chicago and had to back off.

"This time, I'd like to come from behind more, take a step when his hands are over his head and come from the side of him. At least he'll have to change his shot."

McNeill said he also needs to score more himself so he can force Love to do some thinking at both ends of the court.

"I've got to make him think defense," McNeill said. "If he has to play 'em both, I don't think he can keep up the pace."

McNeill scored 22 points at Chicago, four under his high for the regular season.

The Kings also are banking on a conviction that Norm Van Lier can't hold Tiny Archibald to 12 points, as he did at Chicago; and even Van Lier concedes that Tiny could come back with 50.

Scrimmage pleases Onofrio

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri football team completed its third scrimmage of the year Saturday, much to the satisfaction of Coach Al Onofrio.

"The hitting was very fine on both sides of the line and the injuries were very insignificant," Onofrio said.

Last Wednesday, he said, the defense "looked terrific. Today the defense not only played well, but the offense met the challenge and did well, too."

Weiskopf overtakes Nicklaus at Masters

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) —Tom Weiskopf came from six strokes off the pace, stormed past struggling, grimly frustrated Jack Nicklaus with a six-under-par 66 and assumed command in Saturday's drama-packed third round of the Masters Golf Tournament.

Tall Tom, a three-time runnerup in this event but never a winner, put together a 54-hole total of 207, nine under par in sunny and windy weather on the Augusta National Golf Club course, 7,020 yards of rolling Georgia hills that suddenly turned a potential rout into a race.

Nicklaus, who matched a couple of tournament records over the first two rounds and appeared poised to make it a run-away, suddenly developed some putting problems and plummeted back to second with a struggling, one-over-par 73.

At 208, he trails Weiskopf by one going into Sunday's last round of the chase for the famed green jacket Nicklaus has won four times previously and Weiskopf wants so desperately to wear for the first time.

Record-setting Johnny Miller, meanwhile, copped a couple of more standards—but missed the one he wanted—and suddenly became a factor in this prestige-laden tournament that holds such a unique position in the world of golf.

The slender blond, who has the happy habit of forging some extremely low scores, reeled off an improbable string of six birdies in a row and shot a seven-under-par 65 that gave him a 211 total, five under par and four back of Weiskopf.

Red-haired Tom Watson was next, matching par 72 for 212 as such glamor names as Arnold Palmer, Billy Casper, Lee Trevino and Gary Player joined Nicklaus in the miseries of the mid-70s.

But while all had their troubles, none, perhaps, was more stunned than Bobby Nichols. The long-hitting Nichols once crept to within two shots of the lead, but three-putted for bogey on the par-five 15th, a bogey that sent him reeling back to a 72 and a 213 total. He played his last four holes three over par.

He was tied with the portly Casper, a 43-year-old former winner who went to a 73.

No one else was close.

Arnold Palmer, the still-hopeful 45-year-old who once dominated this ancient game, played in the final twosome with Nicklaus and struggled and strained to a 75 and 215.

Nothing went right for Arnold, now graying and wearing glasses but still the most popular player the game has ever known. His approaches found the deep, white-sand bunkers. His putts wouldn't fall. His drives went awry.

He was tied with Trevino, who was as grim-faced as an Aztec god in his frustrations. Trevino, promoted to make another of his off-again, on-again appearances here after he won the PGA National Championship last fall, shot himself out of title contention with a 74. He was tied with Palmer and the other Miller, Allen Miller, at 215. Allen, no relation to Johnny, had a 72.

Player, the little South African who won this crown and the British Open title last year, went to a 73—eight shots higher than Johnny Miller, his playing partner—and was at 219.

U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin had a 71—218.

The dramatic swing from Nicklaus to Weiskopf was reminiscent of the third round of the Heritage Classic just two weeks ago. Nicklaus owned a six-shot lead going into that one, but shot a 74 and Weiskopf tied him with a 68. Nicklaus, however, won the Heritage on the final day. "Yes," Weiskopf agreed after a question, "this is a lot like it—but I sure hope it doesn't turn out the same way."

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Top scores of Saturday's third round in the 39th Masters golf tournament on the 7,020-yard, par-72 Augusta National Golf Club course (a-denotes amateur):

Tom Weiskopf	69-72-66—207
Jack Nicklaus	68-67-73—208
Johnny Miller	75-71-65—211
Tom Watson	70-70-72—212
Billy Casper	70-70-73—213
Bobby Nichols	67-74-72—213
Hubert Green	74-71-70—215
Lee Trevino	71-70-74—215
Arnold Palmer	69-71-75—215
Bud Allin	73-69-73—215
Allen Miller	68-75-72—215

Little League tryouts scheduled this week

Tryout sessions for all boys interested in playing in the major leagues of the Sedalia Little League baseball program this summer will be held Monday through Wednesday in Centennial Park.

The league is reducing its number of teams in the majors from 16 to 10. All boys between the ages of 10-12, regardless of whether or not they were on a major league team last season, will have to try out.

At 5:30 p.m. Monday, tryouts will be held for 10-year-olds. Tryouts for 11-year-olds will be held at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday. The tryout session for 12-year-olds will be held Wednesday at the same time.

The inclement weather date will be Thursday, if needed. The major league draft will be held Thursday night.

Registration cards will be required of all those interested in playing this season. They may be obtained prior to the tryout sessions.

Other matches, which are scheduled to get underway at 8:15 p.m., feature Sonny Myers and Akio Sato in a tag team match against Oki Shikina and Yasu Fuji; while Myers will face Fuji in the opener; Ed Wiskoski goes against Bobby Whitlock in the special match.

The eight wrestlers on the card will clash in a bonus battle royal. The winner will get $800.

Smith-Cotton first in 3-team golf meet

(Democrat-Capital Service)

CLINTON — Smith-Cotton edged Clinton and Pleasant Hill in a triangular golf meet here Friday. The Tigers team total was 172, compared to Pleasant Hill's 175 and Clinton's 176.

Mark Thomas turned in the best nine-round performance for Smith-Cotton with a 41. Rounding out the scoring were Bob Stockwood (42), Greg Banaka (43) and Bobby Joe Curry and Scott Purdum, each with 46.

The medalist was Clinton's Marty Sallaz with a 38.

The Tigers' next match is Monday against Warsaw at Walnut Hills.

Rockets top Knicks; Tomjanovic gets 25

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston bench, led by Gus Bailey, Ron Riley and Zaid Abdul-Aziz, fueled a second-quarter rally to lead the Rockets to a 118-86 rout of New York in the deciding game of their National Baseball Association playoff Saturdav.

The victory gave Houston a 21 edge in the best-of-three series and put the Rockets into a best-of-seven second-round set against the Atlantic Divsion champion Boston Celtics beginning Monday.

The Rockets substitutes, which also were instrumental in Houston's 99-84 victory in the first games, hit eight of 12 field goal attempts in the first half, mostly in the final three minutes when the Rockets outscored the Knicks 12-3 to take a 54-43 halftime lead.

A basket and two free throws by Ed Ratleff plus two straight baskets by Baily and two more by Aziz sparked the spurt for the Rockets, who are in the playoffs for the first time.

The only time New York scored in that span was on a three-point play by Walt Frazier, who led the Knicks with 24 points.

Rudy Tomjanovic scored 25 for the Rockets, and guard Calvin Murphy added 20.

The Knicks, in the playoffs for the ninth straight year, couldn't match Houston in the third quarter as the Rockets maintained their surge. The Rockets boosted their lead to 64-49 after four minutes of play in the period on a jump shot by Tomjanovich.

Except for a brief span where Houston had four straight turnovers, the Rockets were in command the rest of the game.

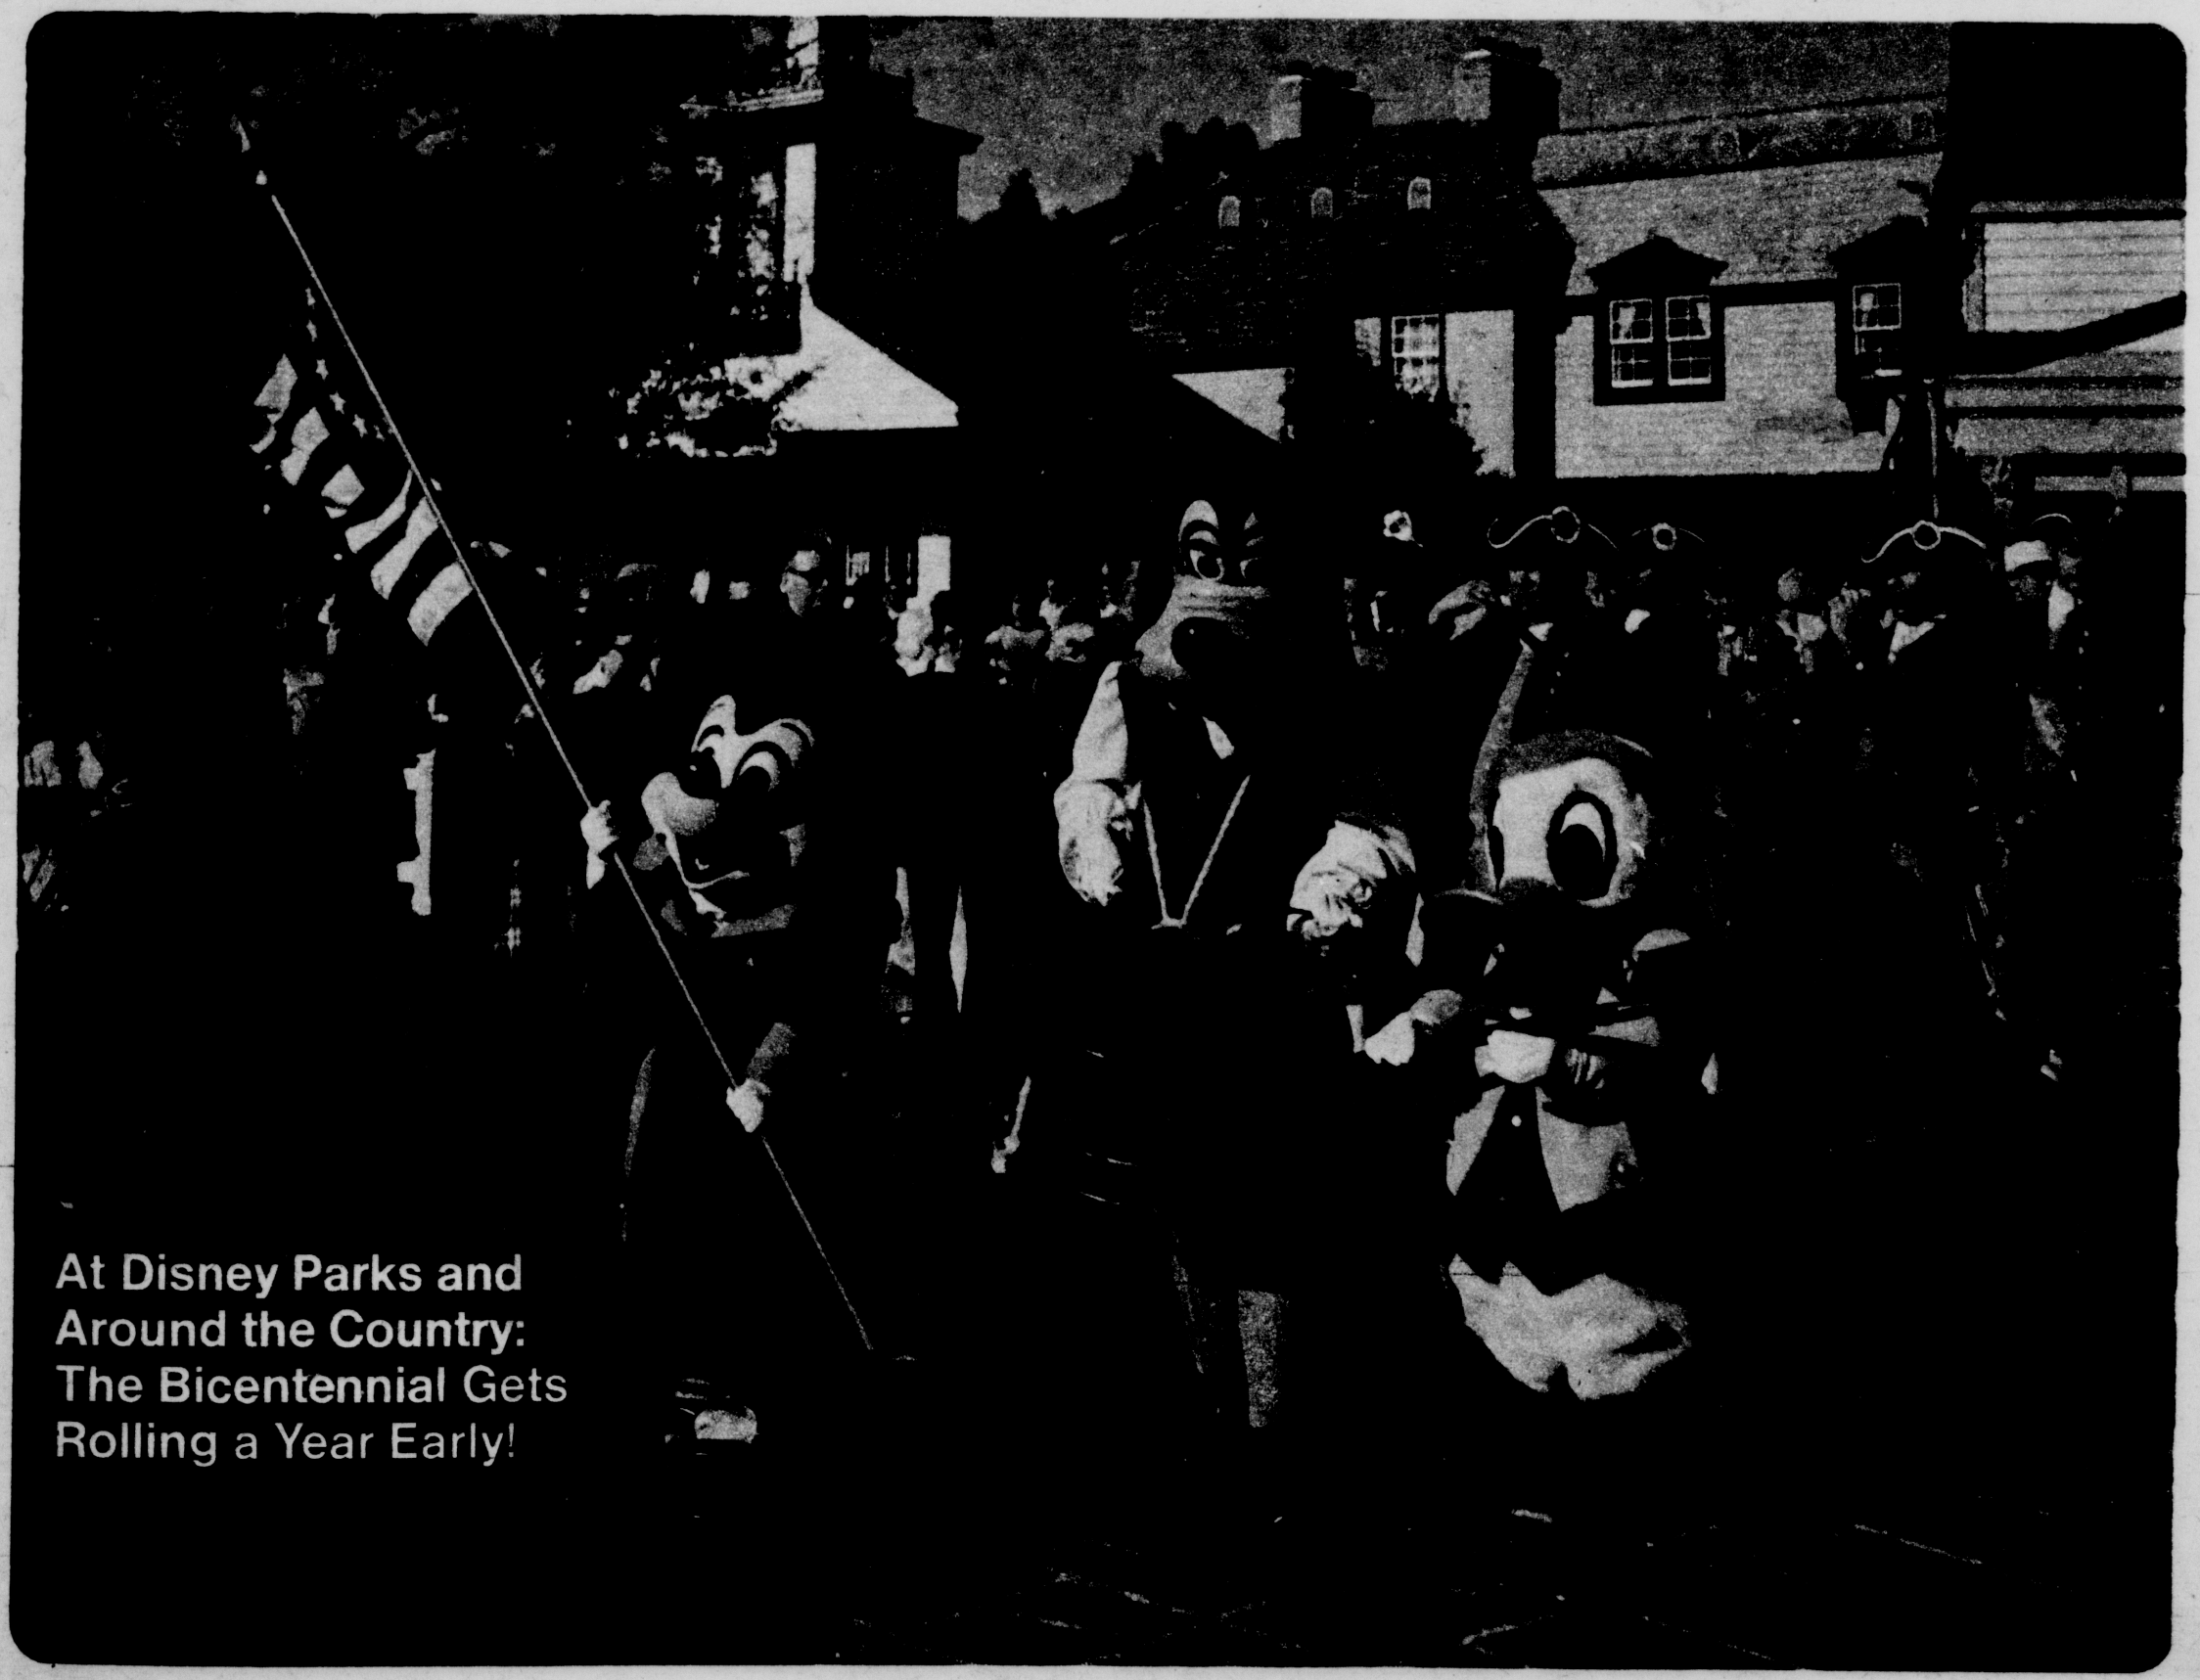
The Great American Food Giveaways: A Congressman Asks, "Are We Really Doing Anybody Any Good?"

Quiz: How to Keep People Who Bug You Under Control



At Disney Parks and Around the Country: The Bicentennial Gets Rolling a Year Early!

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR SEN. HENRY M. JACKSON (D–Wash.)*

Would you support a bill that the President serve only one term—a six-year term?—G. Hoffman, Waterbury, Conn.

● I'm skeptical of efforts to tinker with such fundamental constitutional institutions as the Presidency. No amount of tinkering can assure that abuses will be eliminated. In fact, such changes may well create new possibilities for abuse. There can be no "quick-fix" substitute for the single most important thing–picking individuals of character and competence for positions of high trust.

FOR EVA GABOR

When did you first feel the urge to become an actress?—K.B., Jackson, Tenn.

● When I was four. I used my mother's belt as a top, joined some banana skins together for a skirt, climbed on top of the kitchen table, pretended it was a stage and started to dance.

FOR FREDA PAYNE

How did you get started working for sickle-cell anemia?—Sheila Yvette Harris, Washington, D.C.

● Four years ago, the child of a very close friend of mine died from the disease. At first I felt powerless to do anything about it; but then I realized that as a singer I was in a position to raise money by performing, and to educate the public by talking about this illness during talk-show appearances.

FOR FRANK ROBINSON, manager of the Cleveland Indians

Now that you've become the first black manager in major-league baseball, would you say you've reached all your goals?—Bob Davis, Havelock, N.C.

● Certainly not. Now I have new goals: I want to win a pennant. Also, I want to live to see the day when I am known only as "Frank Robinson, the manager of the Cleveland Indians," not "Frank Robinson, the first black manager in baseball."

FOR RONA BARRETT, author of "Miss Rona"*

Do you have any friends among the stars?—B.B., York, Pa.

● Not too many close ones, although I know them all. Familiarity breeds contempt, and I couldn't have done my job properly if I were bosom friends with each and every one of them. My "Friends List" includes Mae West, Jack Nicholson, Kirk Douglas, Ann-Margret, Fabian and Brenda Vaccaro (if ever a film is made of my life, she's the one I'd like to play me). I have an "Idols List"–Golda Meir and Eleanor Roosevelt.

FOR CLIFTON DAVIS, star of "That's My Mama"*

Why are you so reluctant to talk about relationships with the opposite sex on the show?—J. Mack, Durham, N.C.

● I would love to talk about them, but my sponsors don't want me to. In fact, I'd like to discuss lots of things more openly, but I'm not allowed to. I have to stick to the script, and not change the personality of the character I'm playing.

FOR DINA MERRILL

Why does a woman like you, who has a perfect face, use makeup?—Barbara House, Franklin, Mass.

● I don't have a perfect face; it is makeup that creates that illusion. Because I have a square face, I correct my jawbone with a bit of shadow under the chin. I have a prominent bone under my brow. The fashion today is to highlight it. I don't. It jumps out at you anyway in photos. I tone it down with a deeper shade of makeup.

FOR GEORGE BURNS

Why do you mention Altoona so often in your act?—G. W. Steele, Newark, Ohio

● I played there once, a long time ago, and met this beautiful little blonde waitress. After the last show, I took her down by the lake and. . . . I forgot–this is a family magazine. Let's just say I have fond memories of Altoona, Pa. In fact, I'll never forget it.

FOR JOHNNY BENCH, baseball catcher*

How many gloves do you wear out in a season?—Mrs. Jack Shine, Lima, Ohio

● I usually wear out two gloves during a season. But I always have several gloves around that are in various stages of being broken in.

FOR THE ASK THEM YOURSELF EDITOR

Is Vic Damone still around?—D.L., Hackensack, N.J.

● He sure is. For many years, he stuck mainly to Las Vegas and the West Coast. But he recently made his first New York nightclub appearance in eight years at the Rainbow Grill. Damone was born Vito Farinola in New York. He sang his first song at two, accompanied by his father on the guitar. (Vic's mother was a piano teacher.) His career really started when he won an Arthur Godfrey Talent Scouts show. After an Army stint and ten movies, Vic decided to return to and stick with his first love–singing. When he wed Becky Ann Jones in 1974, he brought along four children from previous marriages. He's an avid golfer and boater, has been named one of the nation's ten best-dressed men, designs his own clothes and is interested in billiards, karate and cooking.

Representative Litton in his Washington office. Until he was elected to the U.S. Congress in 1972, he was a full-time farmer and rancher.

Last year, I attended the much-heralded World Food Conference in Rome. But before going there, I took a swing through six African nations to see some of the drought-stricken countries that would have representatives in Rome asking for food aid. I also visited some not-so-poor African nations to see what plans they had for helping their starving neighbors.

By the time I got to Rome, I was filled with ideas about how we should handle the world food situation. What I was not prepared for was the barrage of attacks that was continually hurled at the United States. It appeared to me that many foreign governments, short on memory and long on words, were more interested in condemning the U.S. than in finding solutions to the problem.

Most accused the U.S. of not helping enough. The Committee of 77—a group of nations that started out numbering 77 but that now numbers more than 100—openly suggested that the U.S. owed help to them, and not only should give them billions of dollars worth of aid, but should also write off these countries' past debts.

Nations such as China, who by their own failure to help starving nations could not condemn the U.S. for failing to help, attacked us for helping too much. Their line of criticism suggested that we helped other countries only so we could continue to exploit them.

Listening to this kind of criticism—plus that coming from countries who said we did not help enough—I started to question the success of our foreign policy. You really can't buy friends, can you?

I am not an isolationist. I recognize that we live in a world that is growing smaller every day. I also recognize that the United States has a moral and humanitarian obligation to help others. I have had enough business and political experience to know that helping others is not without its rewards, even if help is not extended with that purpose in mind. Obviously, it is to the advantage of the U.S. that we live in a world of nations whose people are both stable and economically well off.

But one look at America's economy today should tell us that spending and giveaways like those that followed World War II can't continue. At that time, we looked at a destroyed France, England, Italy, Japan and many of the other countries leveled by the ravages of the war and decided we would help rebuild the world, for friend and foe alike.

What we came up with was the Marshall Plan, a mammoth giveaway foreign-aid program. And it was a good one. We were strong and Europe was weak. We had many natural resources and the capacity to produce. We felt an obligation to help other nations and we recognized that they would eventually become good markets for our products.

Well, times have changed. Europe has long since rebuilt. Still, we continue to maintain more than 300,000 troops there. And despite the fact that Japan sells us billions of dollars more in goods than we sell it, we continue to have troops there too.

What I am suggesting is not a policy of isolationism, but one in keeping with the economics of today, rather than a continuation of one developed during a time when the American dollar held a different position in the world economy. Show me a businessman or a nation that can't adjust to changing times, that spends in the bad times as profligately as in the good times, and I'll show you an incipient bankrupt.

"At one point an African leader told me that 'family planning' were dirty words in his country and that America had no right to meddle in his country's internal affairs. I pointed out that 'helping countries unwilling to help themselves' were getting to be dirty words in America."

I visited with the leaders of some of the more prosperous African nations, such as Nigeria, which saw its oil exports jump from $2 billion to over $8 billion in one year and which expects to take in over $16 billion in 1975. I asked its leaders if they had any plans to help their starving African neighbor to the north. I was told they had none.

It appears to me that it is time that developing countries who are asking America for aid start setting a good example by aiding their neighbors whenever possible. And if they aren't willing to do that, at least they should be willing to help themselves instead of taking our aid with one hand and slapping us with the other.

I also remember the World Food Population Conference in August in Bucharest, and the speeches made by some food-short and overpopulated countries such as India. They wanted no part of America's plan to bring runaway world-population increases in check. Instead, these countries blamed U.S. consumers for eating too much and U.S. producers for not producing enough.

World hunger is caused by too many people and not enough food. Bangladesh is a nation the size of Missouri, but by the year 2000 it is expected to have as many people as now populate the entire United States. Its president, Sheik Mujibur Rahman, is concerned over the prospect and the urgent need to find a remedy. In a recent speech explaining why he had expanded his presidential powers, he referred to Bangladesh's current "chaotic situation" and asked: "How long will friends continue to give us food and assistance? We must have population control. We must discipline ourselves. I do not want to lead a nation of beggars."

In 1830, we had fewer than one billion persons inhabiting the earth. In the following 100 years, we added another billion, and in the next 30 years (by 1960) one billion more appeared.

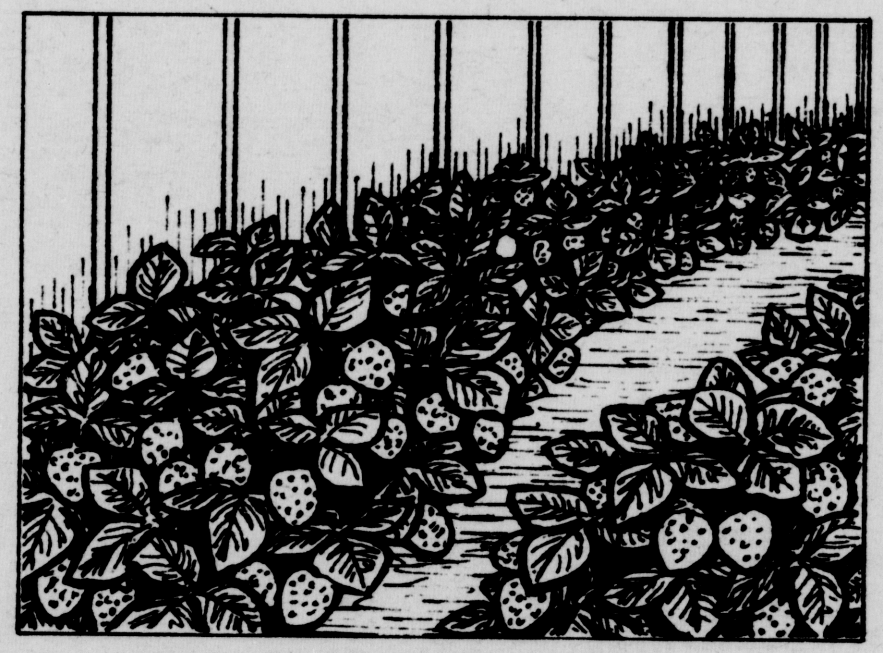
We have been filling orders for strawberry plants at House of Wesley for more than 20 years. It's important to us to offer the hardiest, best producing varieties. And it saves our customers money! We are constantly searching for better ones. The ones that are best for shortcake, freezing and jams. We listen when our customers tell us about the varieties that taste and produce best for them. We also make sure that the plants we send out are especially adapted to your area. Sorry, they cannot be shipped to Arizona.

TO OUR CUSTOMERS IN THE NORTHERN, MIDWEST AND EASTERN STATES we send the extra sweet, giant, ROBINSON strawberry plants. This top-selling variety produces big, juicy, bright red berries. They're so large you can expect to get about 30 berries to the quart. They often grow as big as a plum! This is a firm berry that ripens fast. It is highly disease and drought resistant and winter hardy. The Robinson plant itself is relatively small but very vigorous and high yielding. It is especially adapted for the long fruiting season in the midwest.

TO OUR CUSTOMERS IN THE SOUTH AND WEST COAST STATES we send the new TIOGA strawberry plant. This is an extra-ordinary new university-tested virus-free berry that produces a big flush of delicious red berries from April to July. They are plump, sweet and juicy. The long-producing TIOGA has retained the better qualities of older varieties - - produces more fruit, better flavor and firmness. Don't compare the TIOGA with ordinary varieties.



House of Wesley Plants Are All Indexed Virus-Free

You always get clean, nuclear planting stock. Meristemmed mother plants are held in isolation in University plant pathology greenhouses until indexed as virus-free. This means you get superior fruit, double yields and increased plant vigor.

All Number-One Plants and Easy To Grow

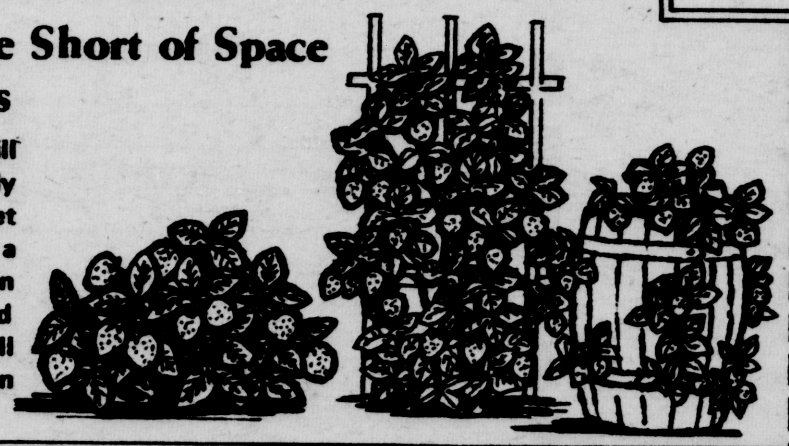
Plant in fertile clay soil if possible. Set plants 18" to 24" apart in 4' rows. They produce lots of new runners to give you a bigger patch every year. PLANTING HINT: For best results plant in new ground where strawberries have not been grown for several years to avoid contaminating these healthy virus-free plants.

Strawberries Should Be Included In Every Home Garden

Even if you don't raise a garden - - you should grow strawberries. They are not hard to grow, yet they probably produce the greatest pleasure of all home grown fruits. Strawberry shortcake - - jams - - and eating fresh from the patch! In these days of high food prices a strawberry patch is an especially good investment. And you don't have to wait years to harvest a crop! Strawberries will supply a full day's allowance of Viamin C. This is more Vitamin C than is supplied by an equal weight of orange juice.

What To Do When You Are Short of Space And Still Want Strawberries

A very small space (as small as 9' x 12') will produce all the berries an average-sized family will need. But if you don't have even a few feet to spare you can still have them. Drill holes in a nail keg, fill it with dirt and put the plants in the holes. This is decorative as well as a good way to grow many delicious berries in a small space. Trellises and strawberry pyramids can also be made when space is limited.



Our Full Protection Guarantee

All plants are guaranteed to be of high quality, and to arrive in good healthy condition or purchase price will be refunded. RETURN SHIPPING LABEL ONLY - - you may keep the plants. (One year limit).

Food Giveaways

Continued

A fourth billion has probably been added by now (1975), and a fifth billion is expected by 1985. Most estimates suggest a world population of 6.5 to 7.5 billion by the year 2000. At this rate, by the end of the next century we will have 37 billion people on this earth!

Most of the food-hungry countries not only are experiencing their biggest population growths, but seem to be the least interested in doing anything about it. Each time I suggested family-planning programs to high officials of African nations, I was met with critical frowns from my hosts and raised eyebrows from our embassy officials. At one point an African leader told me that "family planning" were dirty words in his country and that America had no right to meddle in his country's internal affairs. I pointed out that "helping countries unwilling to help themselves" were getting to be dirty words in America and that asking us to give away food at a time when we were experiencing our greatest food shortage in 40 years was meddling in our internal affairs.

Because of the inelastic demand for food, a one percent reduction in supply in America can result in a four or five percent increase at the retail level. A five percent reduction in supply can increase consumer food prices by 25 percent. And inelasticity works against producers as well as consumers. If steaks were five cents each, for example, you still wouldn't eat 50 for lunch. Thus, food surpluses drive prices down for the producer just as severely as slight shortages drive them up for the consumer.

It was with all of this in mind that, upon my return from the World Food Conference, I introduced a bill in Congress that limits America's nearly $1 billion yearly food giveaways to those countries that meet us halfway in solving the problems of world hunger. Our "Food for Peace Program" (Public Law 480), which was passed in 1954 when we had huge surpluses of grain and millions of idle acres, no longer works. Our graineries today are empty, and most of our idle acres have been put into production. We will give, yes, but recipient nations must do their part. That means they must put more emphasis on their own agriculture production. It means they must build irrigation ditches instead of A-bombs when their country is filled with starving people. And it means that if they want large families, fine, but they can't say that we have an obligation to feed them.

My bill specifies that no Public Law 480 funds will be used in the future to give food to countries whose populations are growing faster than the world average if such countries are not making reasonable efforts to put forth family-planning programs. Exceptions would be made for short-term emergency situations.

Is this a coldhearted approach? I don't think so. Nor do I think it is inhumane. I think it is far more humane to put recipient nations on notice that world-population growth is going to have to be slowed now. If it isn't, and we wait, millions of starving people will learn of the necessity of limiting population growth the hard way.

A Postscript: Surprisingly, my bill has received strong support from religious and social leaders who one might have thought would have opposed it. Many newspapers, including President Ford's hometown paper, The Grand Rapids Press, have given my bill editorial support. It remains to be seen what kind of support it will have in Congress. My bet is that if it were put to a vote before the American people it would pass by an overwhelming majority. Perhaps if this same majority speaks up to its representatives, Congress will pass it too.

THE GENIUS OF CHARLES M. RUSSELL

A LIMITED EDITION ON FINE RIDGEWOOD CHINA

The Western Collector Plate Series

Charles Russell roamed the early American range as a hunter, trapper and wrangler—and also as a poet, painter and sculptor. Along with Frederick Remington, he is considered a genius among Western documentary artists. Few American artists have received the acclaim given to Charles Russell both during his lifetime and since his death in 1926, and fewer artists have had their works loved as much.

Charles Russell saw, participated in, and portrayed in vivid artwork, one of the most colorful periods in American history. He even worked as a night wrangler for a dozen years so that he had all day to paint and sculpt, but it was not until he met Will Rogers, who was a fan of his, that he was persuaded to work at his art full-time.

The finest examples of his great paintings have been chosen for these four magnificent Limited Edition Collector Plates. 8½" in diameter with 24Kt. gold rims, they are on the finest Ridgewood China and although they are supposed to sell for $85.00 for the set of four—your Special Price from Joy's Limited Editions for the next 4 weeks (or until we're sold out) is only $60.00. Here is one series that every American will be proud to own.

1975 A Big Bicentennial Year, Too!

FAMILY WEEKLY and the U.S. Bicentennial Office of the National Parks Commission put their heads together to come up with a travelers' guide to some of the most important and interesting Bicentennial-related events for this "pre-Bicentennial" year. Our conclusion: 1975 is perhaps as big a year for celebrating 200th birthdays as 1976 will be. See if you don't agree.

The first major event of the nationwide celebration, and certainly among the most historic, is the 200th anniversary of the Battle of Lexington and Concord in Massachusetts. The "shot heard around the world" was fired on April 19, Redcoats and patriots will march again in many Park Service living-history demonstrations.

1775. The townspeople of each town—Lexington, Concord and Lincoln—plan to commemorate the historic occasion next weekend with typical New England Patriots Day parades. Concord's festivities begin at 5 a. m. on the 19th at North Bridge—located in Minute Man National Historical Park. The parade will pass there at approximately 10 a. m., and there will be appropriate ceremonies honoring those farmers who took the irrevocable step that led to a new nation.

The Second Continental Congress convened at Philadelphia on May 10, 1775. It was an eventful day. After almost 14 months of deliberation, that congress issued the Declaration of Independence. This May 10, 1975, the convening of that historic body will be commemorated in Independence National Historical Park. Call the park for the exact time—it is an event you shouldn't miss.

Meanwhile, a continent and an ocean away, in Hawaii, three National Park Service sites are celebrating with a series of unusual programs. Idyllic City of Refuge National Historical Park on the Kona Coast is featuring a living history based on the native culture of the Islands during America's colonial period. At Haleakala National Park on Maui, site of the famous 10,023-foot volcano, the beautiful Seven Pools section has a living history planned on ancient Hawaiian taro farming.

Three of our best-known patriots will lead the Bicentennial tribute in the two Disney parks.

HOW THE FOLKS AT DISNEY ARE CELEBRATING OUR BIRTHDAY

A Bicentennial celebration would not be complete without two of America's favorite characters—Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck. Along with sidekick Goofy, they will star in a spectacular salute to America's history, "America on Parade." This colorful and almost continuous procession will debut this June at both Disneyland and Walt Disney World, and will be staged daily at both locations through September 6, 1976. Officials of Walt Disney Productions estimate that more than 25 million people will view the parade during the 15-month period. This will break all records for attendance at any production in the entire history of the U.S.!

Aside from the old Disney favorites, an entirely new family of characters is being developed, the "People of America." These larger-than-life dolls, together with hundreds of live performers, will highlight a pageant that traces America's glorious achievements and contributions to world progress. This monumental celebration promises to make history fun for old and young alike.

In keeping with the grandiose Disney tradition, a myriad of other events is planned at both the California and Florida parks, among them: A special one-week salute to every state in the Union, a new version of the widely acclaimed film "America the Beautiful," and a unique and thoroughly patriotic "Fantasy in the Sky" fireworks display.

Before: "When you're 180 pounds, you have to grin and bear it—or do something about your weight."

After: "125 pounds! As you can see, I did something about my weight."

Now: "As the mother of five, I decided to put on a body shirt so you could see my slimmer-than-ever figure—117 pounds."

She had five children and lost 63 pounds.

How Shirley Badders got fat having 3 babies, took it off, then slimmed down even more having twins.

By Ruth L. McCarthy

Shirley is quite a woman. You could even say she's a knockout! Poised. Articulate. Clothes-conscious. Happy with her husband. Proud of her five children. Why, she's even eight pounds slimmer and almost one inch taller since the last time I saw her. Perhaps because she's standing straighter these days. Whatever the reason, Shirley Badders has come a long way in the past three years.

At our first meeting, she had lost 55 pounds —or what she liked to call her "shame fat." You see, Shirley had come from a large family, so she had learned to cook enormous meals. When she married, in her teens, she had a dreadful time getting used to cutting down on the amount of food she cooked. If it wasn't all eaten, she'd feel so ashamed about wasting good food that she'd stuff herself with it.

As a result, each time she became pregnant, she had to wear maternity clothes in her second month. By the time her third child was born, Shirley was carrying around 180 pounds — mostly from the waist down. Why it was almost impossible for her to find pantyhose to fit. So she wore regular stockings with the fat bulging over the top.

Actually, it was a party joke about her "hungover" knees that finally jolted Shirley into doing something about her weight. Luckily, she remembered that her mother had once used those reducing-plan candies, Ayds®, and with great success. So Shirley picked up a box of the vanilla caramel kind at a drug counter and started on the plan. She took one or two Ayds before each meal with a hot drink and they really helped her cut back on what she ate. They even helped free Shirley from the late-night sandwich trap, and she was able to go from 180 to 125 pounds.

Although Shirley said little about her marriage during that first meeting, there were problems. Unfortunately, they didn't go away even after she'd slimmed down. So eventually Shirley and her husband separated.

During my recent meeting with Shirley, I learned she had married again. And happily so to Larry Badders. When I admired the way she'd kept her weight down, Shirley smiled and said that Larry had never seen her heavy, except when she was pregnant with their twins. And even then, she apparently had held her weight down. Because Shirley told of a sightseeing trip to Rock City when she was seven months "big," and she was still able to squeeze through Thin Man's Pass.

Interestingly, Shirley weighed only 121 pounds the day she left the hospital (in Muncie, Indiana) with the twins. And at this writing she is now a trim 117 pounds. "I no longer have to worry about willpower," said Shirley. "Thanks to the Ayds plan, the willpower is 'there' now."

Your words certainly are an inspiration to all of us, Shirley. With five children and a figure as trim as yours, you've got to have something going for you. Must be those Ayds!

Bicentennial Year

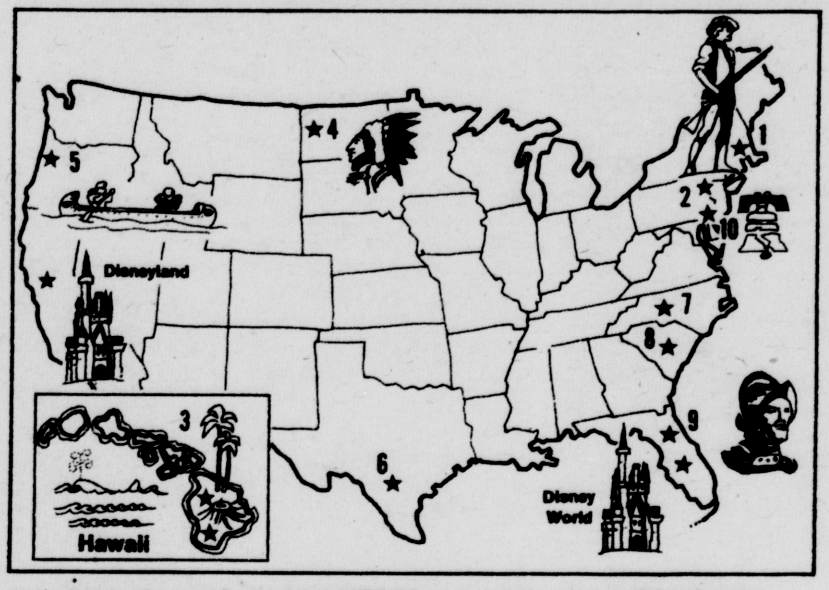
At Hawaii Volcanoes National Park on the "big island" visitors will enjoy special demonstrations of lauhala weaving, the making of grapefruit poi and ancient hulas. If you wish, you can even receive instruction in ancient hulas and the old Hawaiian language.

The Bicentennial is being honored in many different ways in every state. In North Dakota, for example, from May through September both Fort Union Trading Post National Historic Site and Theodore Roosevelt National Memorial Park are featuring unusual Indian living-history demonstrations, especially of such artistic crafts as bead- and quillwork, painting and leatherwork.

At Oregon's Fort Clatsop National Memorial this summer you can discover the frontier life-style of Lewis and Clark during their famous exploration of the West. While down in Texas at Fort Davis National Historic Site there will be a special old-fashioned Fourth of July celebration—frontier cavalry style.

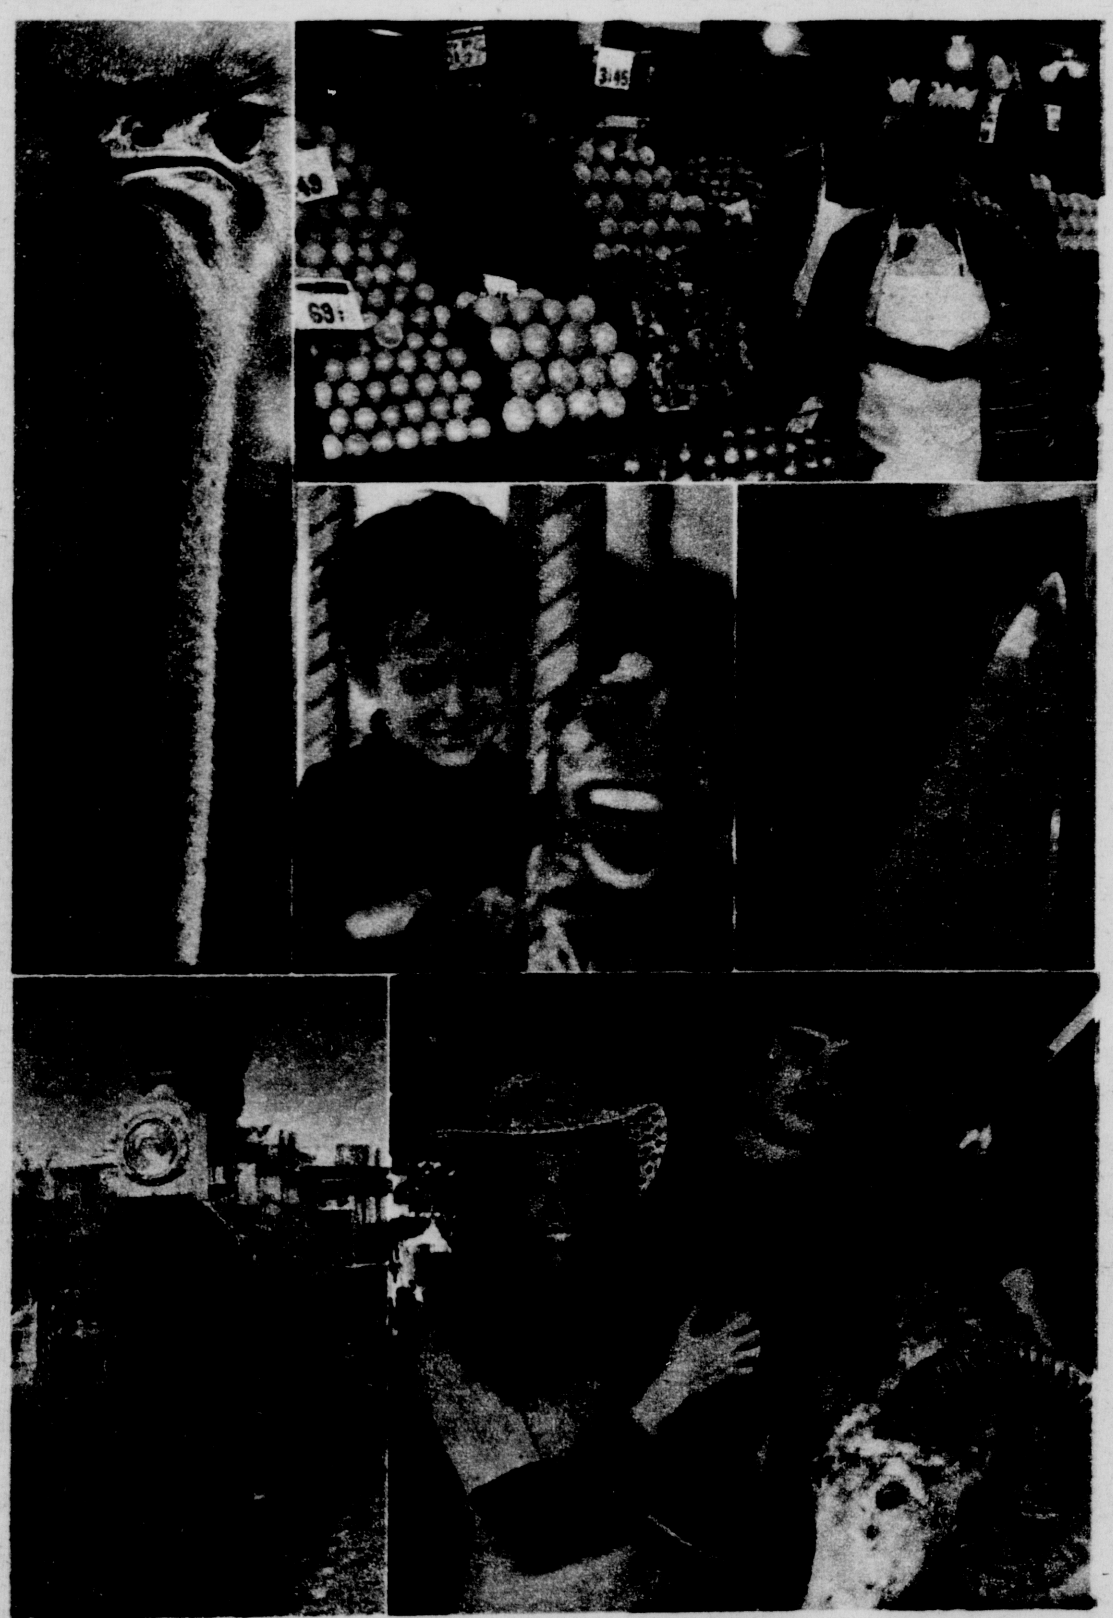
Historically speaking, there are five key Revolutionary War battlefields in the South: Moores Creek and Guilford Courthouse in North Carolina and King's Mountain, Cowpens and Fort Moultrie in South Carolina. They will conduct living-history demonstrations all summer. Lesser known but just as exciting to visit is Castillo de San Marcos National Monument at St. Augustine in Florida. It is the oldest masonry fort in the continental United States—construction by the Spanish started in 1672—and was built to protect the first European settlement. A British stronghold from the end of the French and Indian War in 1763 through the Revolution, the fort this year will feature special living-history programs this summer emphasizing the little-understood but vital Loyalist views held by so many Americans of the day.



Locations of some important 1975 Bicentennial events: 1) Lexington and Concord, Mass.; 2) Philadelphia, Pa.; 3) Hawaii; 4) two parks in North Dakota; 5) Fort Clatsop, Ore.; 6) Fort Davis, Texas; 7 & 8) battlefields in North and South Carolina; 9) St. Augustine, Fla.; 10) Washington, D.C.

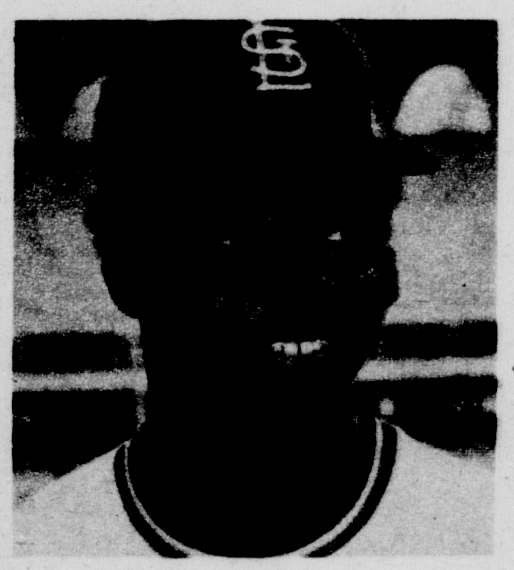
One of the major events of 1975 Bicentennial celebrations will be found at Washington, D.C., from June 25 through July 6. This is the ninth annual Festival of American Folk Life held on the 50-acre mall between the Lincoln Memorial and the Washington Monument. This one will be the biggest ever. It is being cosponsored by the Smithsonian Institution and the National Park Service, and it will feature a number of folk cultures, a kaleidescope of exhibits and demonstrations tracing our nation's roots and traditions.

As with all these remarkable events in 1975, the folk festival is a celebration of the links with our heritage—the real roots of America. What better way to honor and enjoy our Bicentennial than that?



If you're looking for fun, St. Louis is a steal.

—BY LOU BROCK—



Baseball takes me all over the country. And comparing the cities I've been through has convinced me that St. Louis is the fun place in the Midwest.

It's small enough not to get lost in, big enough not to get bored in, old enough to have a rich history, and new enough to offer days of vacation excitement for everyone.

For kids, there's Six Flags, the Forest Park Zoo, McDonnell Planetarium, Grant's Farm and riverfront boat rides.

And families love the Cardinals, Blues, ABA Spirits and Soccer Stars. And the fantastic ride to the top of the 630-ft. Arch. Plus some of the best eating and shopping you'll ever find, as fancy or casual as you like.

You can travel farther and spend more. But you can't find a nicer spot to visit. And it's less than a day's drive from anywhere in the Midwest.

Plant Now . . . Step Back . . . and Watch Out!

Amazing Super-Growing Species Soars Into A Magnificent Tree IN JUST ONE YEAR!

And if you think that's startling — just wait 'til you see the spectacular show when it starts to flower — Actually smothers itself in such lavish masses of bouquets, its branches appear to bend from the sheer mass and weight of the magnificent blooms.

That's the kind of wondrous results reported by the U.S. Gov't. Plant Research Stations . . . Botanical Gardens . . . and University Plant Scientists on what is undoubtedly the most fantastic flowering shade tree ever introduced in America — the incredibly beautiful Paulownia . . . the only flowering shade tree in all of nature that can do all of this and more:

READ WHAT THE EXPERTS SAY ABOUT THE INCREDIBLE PAULOWNIA . . . THE FASTEST GROWING FLOWERING SHADE TREE EVER DISCOVERED!

HEIGHT: Gov't. Plant Scientists and Botanical Experts report 18 to 22 feet of growth the very first year on specimen trees.

That's more growth IN JUST ONE SINGLE SEASON than even a fully matured 15-year-old flowering dogwood, or prize star magnolia.

SPREAD: University Researchers report beautiful ornamental spread of nearly 40 feet at maturity . . . packed with thousands of magnificent flowers. Think of it. Not only does it surge skyward in the most spectacular burst of beauty you've ever seen . . . but, also arches out in a magazine-cover display of color-drenched branches.

EASE: Leading editors report: Tree of unusual merit . . . grows in almost any soil . . . and below-zero root-hardy, too. Yes, because nature has endowed this landscape-artist's "dream-tree" with super-growing strength . . . because it is virtually resistant to most every common disease . . . requires practically no care at all. You simply plant it and forget it . . . it's as simple as that.

A TOWER OF BEAUTY IN JUST ONE SINGLE YEAR!

Yes, who says you have to spend a small fortune for a flowering shade tree? — and then spend half a lifetime waiting for it to grow? It used to be that way — BUT NOT ANY LONGER. Not since we have finally tracked down the one single tree in all of nature that hoists itself high, so fast you can literally measure the difference in both height and spread from week to week . . . or take a yardstick and measure the incredible difference in feet from month to month!

GROWS IN ANY SOIL — REQUIRES NO SPECIAL CARE — SOARS INTO A MASTERPIECE OF LUSH, GREEN BEAUTY IN JUST A MATTER OF MONTHS!

Best of all, unlike most trees that demand sprays, pesticides, insecticides and constant pampering . . . the only thing you do when you plant Paulownia is water it and enjoy it. That's why leading botanical gardens . . . landscape artists . . . garden editors . . . can't stop raving about its indescribable beauty . . . its super-growing, super-flowering ability . . . its trouble-free maintenance. Is it any wonder that every leading expert has hailed Paulownia in the most glowing terms . . . recommended it again and again for home-owners who want a stunning display of both beauty and shade . . . and with practically no more work than a couple of sprinkles a season.

Picture your patio bathed in the cool, fragrant beauty of this show-stopping miracle-tree from early spring to the first snows of winter.

VITAL STATISTICS FROM LEADING EXPERTS

MATURE GROWTH SIZE — 45 to 60 feet

MATURE GROWTH SPREAD — 35 to 50 feet

ZONE OF HARDINESS — completely root-hardy from deepest south to as far north as Montreal, Canada. Flowers beautifully even after 10 below zero winter freeze.

ONE YEAR GROWTH RATE — Experts report range of up to 22 feet the first year after planting on specimen trees under optimum conditions, up to 15 to 18 feet under poorer conditions when pruned for foliage growth only.

FLOWERS — When tree is at blooming size, in just a few short years, you'll enjoy thick panicles of fragrant lavender blooms. Highly recommended by landscape artists as specimen planting for front lawn.

SOIL REQUIREMENTS — Natural strength and vigor allow it to soar full forth in even poor soil. You can plant it anywhere.

CARE — No special care whatsoever. No spraying. No dusting. No special feeding. Naturally resistant to most every disease, pest or insect.

TAKES BUT 10 MINUTES TO PLANT — REWARDS YOU WITH A LIFETIME OF BEAUTY STARTING THIS VERY YEAR!

ONLY A LIMITED SUPPLY YET AVAILABLE FOR RELEASE TO THE PUBLIC — SO ACT NOW!

Now, the price of this super-growing shade tree is not the $20 or $30 you might expect . . . and probably be glad to pay. On this special introductory offer it is a mere $3.95 . . . yes, only $3.95 for this magnificent shade tree that rewards you with such a glorious display of growth IN JUST ONE SINGLE YEAR!

However, since supply is still sorely limited . . . it will take our growers at least another year or two to propagate enough trees for full nationwide distribution. Therefore, this may be your only chance this year to plant and enjoy this wonder-tree entirely at our risk. And since now is the time to plant, you must act now!

Here's a luxury sight you don't have to wait half a lifetime growing — a matched pair of flowering showpieces, so strong and sturdy you can actually sling a hammock between them.

Never Has There Been A Faster Growing, Flowering Shade Tree Introduced To America — Royal Paulownia

Yes, plant now — see it soar forth in a tower of beauty in just one year! But wait — That's only half the thrill. Just wait 'til you see the looks of awe and envy on your neighbors' faces when it starts to erupt into bloom. Each branch so densely packed with flowers, you can hardly see a twig peek through. It's the most spectacular splurge of both growth and beauty of any shade tree ever brought to this country. And it's so easy to grow even a child can do it.

So Remember: Satisfaction is guaranteed. You must be thrilled in every way with this wondrous flowering shade tree or RETURN AT ANY TIME within 90 days for a full refund of your purchase price. Use the no Risk Coupon below.

GENE LITTLER:

They Said His Career Was Over—Then He Beat Johnny Miller . . .

When Gene Littler left the pro golf tour in 1972, his career—and perhaps his life—seemed to be over. The agonizing pains in his shoulder and armpit had been diagnosed as cancer. To eradicate the cancer, he had to undergo surgery of the lymph glands. He still remained confident that he could make a comeback. . . . His confidence was justified when he returned to the tour in 1973 and earned $95,000 in winnings for that year and over $100,000 in 1974. His greatest performance came early this year when he won the $37,000 first prize in the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am tournament on one of the country's most demanding courses. The field he beat included the incomparable Johnny Miller. "That Crosby victory proved beyond any doubt that my comeback is both real and lasting," Littler says. "I spent years before my surgery trying to win the Crosby, but I was never able to bring it off."

. . . Littler's career has been studded with victories. He won the U.S. Open in 1961 and won 23 other tournaments before his ordeal with cancer. . . . That ordeal, he says, has some positive aspects. "In some small way, I am able to be an inspiration to a lot of people who have had the same problem I did," he points out. "It makes them realize they can still do many things and be successful." Littler has always been popular because of his easygoing nature, modest demeanor and lack of temperament. His smoothness has earned him the nickname "Gene the Machine." Littler says his "easy-does-it" manner stems from the fact that he refuses to make golf an obsession, "Sure, I like to win, but I enjoy the game. I would never let it devour me." A native of San Diego, 44-year-old Littler has a wife Shirley and a son Curt.

The Doctor Lets You In

Some Facts About That Mysterious Killer, "Stroke"

Presidents Wilson and FDR, John Quincy Adams, Andrew Jackson and William Howard Taft died of it. Doctors call it CVA, or cerebrovascular accident, but it's usually called stroke. . . . There are different causes but all have one thing in common: Circulation of the blood to the brain is impeded because of a break in a blood vessel or, more commonly, because of a blood clot. What are the symptoms? There may be sudden weakness of muscles or paralysis of one side of the body, or difficulty in talking or understanding. In extreme cases, there may be a coma. Older people are more susceptible, particularly if they have heart disease or have had previous little strokes, and especially—the biggest cause—if they have high blood pressure. Also, people who sleep abnormally long—say, ten hours regularly—are four times as likely to die of stroke. (Why, no one knows.) There is another variety of stroke called the "little stroke." Doctors refer to this as TCI (transient cerebral ischemia, meaning temporary suppression of blood flow in the brain). It is caused by a temporary contraction of a blood vessel in the brain and can create momentary dizziness or unfamiliarity with surroundings, slurred speech or temporary weakness of limbs. People may get a number of these and forget about them. But the danger is that little strokes may be forerunners of big strokes. A study was recently undertaken to find out if one tablet of aspirin daily can prevent stroke. The results are not in yet. But the reason for aspirin is that it reduces the clottability of the blood. And 80 percent of big strokes are due to blood clots in the brain. Only about 20 percent are due to hemorrhage.

People Quiz

Are People Bugging You?

Here's a Short Guide To Self-Defense

True or False: It's not difficult to discourage door-to-door salesmen if you know the magic words. (See number 4)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. It's difficult to deal with a relative, friend or pushy neighbor who makes a habit of dropping in around mealtime, thus jockeying himself into an invitation to dinner.

2. The best way to get rid of a bore is to subject him to a barrage of caustic humor or biting wit.

3. There is no easy way to deal with the character who's always coming over to borrow tools or whatever else he may need but is too cheap to buy.

4. It's not difficult to discourage unwanted door-to-door salesmen if you know the magic words.

5. Anyone who has distinguished himself through hard work and accomplishment should not be surprised to find that there are many people who take delight in "bad-mouthing" him.

ANSWERS

1. False. If a relative or acquaintance you don't care for bugs you by frequently dropping in at dinner time uninvited, you can use one of several psychologically tested techniques. You can simply switch the menu, serving the freeloader something he is known to dislike or to be allergic to. If that doesn't work, try seasoning the visitor's portion too generously with salt or whatever. This will make a lasting impression on him and will probably cure him of "just happening to drop in" at the dinner hour.

2. False. As one psychiatrist observes: The typical bore has a faulty sense of humor that makes it difficult for him to appreciate or see the point of jokes or witticisms. It's further noted that "The bore's pompousness and imperviousness to wit are two of the prerequisites of being a bore." Most behavioral specialists are inclined to believe that "bores are not to be gotten rid of except by rough means. They are to be scraped off like scales from a fish."

3. False. The chronic borrower often employs a special technique: He starts in small, then gradually works up to capital items. The first thing he asks to borrow involves such a trivial consideration that you'd feel like a piker turning him down. This puts the chronic borrower in business. Studies at Stanford University show that granting a first small request makes it psychologically much more difficult to refuse subsequent larger ones. Now that the borrower has gained a foothold, how do you cope with him? Simple. You start borrowing from the borrower. He may not have anything worth borrowing, but you borrow it anyway. This tactic disconcerts him, and when you have him off balance, you administer the coup de grâce. "Joe," you say to him, "I've got a real problem. My mother-in-law's threatening to visit us for a couple of weeks and our house isn't big enough to accommodate her. Do you suppose we could borrow that spare room of yours—just while she's here . . . ?" You let your voice trail off here, and you watch Joe's face. As he gropes for words, you know he's gotten the message. He's met the super-borrower and he's out of his league. You can rest assured he'll find someone else to bug with his constant borrowing.

4. True. And it doesn't matter in the slightest what these magic words are—as long as they're in a foreign language. Delivered with an expressive shrug when you answer the door, this will disconcert the unwelcome caller, causing him to seek greener fields where there is less of a language barrier.

5. True. There are two chief ways by which people can give their egos a shot in the arm: by distinguishing themselves through their own talents, or by downgrading and belittling others. Unfortunately too many people take the latter option. If they bug you by their "bad-mouthing," don't let it throw you. Consider it a compliment, for this is the treatment such people consistently reserve for their superiors.

CARY GRANT AT 71
He has only one regret . . .

Cary Grant says: "I feel better today than I did 40 years ago when I was at the peak of my film career." He hasn't made a film in nine years, and yet just mentioning his name still sends shivers up many a woman's spine. Looking fit and much younger than his 71 years, Grant is presently involved in a number of projects, among them, renovating his Beverly Hills farmhouse (which multimillionaire Howard Hughes used to rent when he wanted ultimate privacy and peace). He is not in retirement—in fact, he works at least 12 hours a day as a board director of both the Fabergé cosmetic company and Western Airlines. His only regret is that he can't return to his native England to live. There is someone dear to his heart in California and he won't leave her. Who is this fascinating woman? His eight-year-old daughter Jennifer (from his marriage to Dyan Cannon, with whom he is still battling for custody rights). What about remarriage? With five marriages behind him, Cary says he is in no hurry to take that step again. Sorry, girls.

Boxing, the "harmless" sport: A report just published in England provides fresh ammunition for those who want to see professional boxing banned. The study provided conclusive evidence that extensive cerebral damage can be incurred from repeated blows to the head. Dr. J. A. Nicholas Corsellis, who headed the British Medical Association research team, concedes that the brutal heyday of boxing is behind us, but he warns that all risks have not yet been eliminated. "I will never allow my 14-year-old son to don boxing gloves," he says. "A single, or even many punches to the head, need not visibly alter the structure of the brain, but there is still the danger that at any moment and for any reason, one or more blows to the head will cause the destruction of irreplaceable cerebral tissue."

A woman's best defense against rape? "Rape may seem about as bad as anything that can happen to you, but it is not as bad as being born blind, being maimed or killed," says Frederic Storaska, author of "How to Say No to a Rapist—and Survive." Mr. Storaska hopes to shed new light on the rape problem by erasing the myths surrounding it and reducing the fear associated with it to a manageable level. He devotes all his time to lecturing at campuses across the country and recently made a movie with the Learning Corporation of America as part of his rape-prevention program. How can you avoid rape? Use a little psychology. Try talking to a would-be rapist as you would to anyone, but above all don't lose your composure. "Rape is often a humiliation of the woman in order to enhance the rapist's ego. It is not simply sexual aggression," Storaska concludes. He believes that the frequently suggested methods of self-defense (tear-gas pens, martial arts, screaming for help) are actually the most harmful because they tend to increase the assailant's anger or perhaps even excite him further.

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY
By Richard Armour

CAT NIPPED

Our cat is always leaving fur
On chairs and sofas. We demur
And wish it picked the floor for sleeping
Instead of always upward leaping.

Our cat claws chair legs, also draperies,
As well as tablecloths and naperies.
Our cat wants in and then wants out,
It's underfoot when it's about.

Thus what I really do not know
Is how it makes us love it so.
I guess it's just that each meow
Is followed by a purr—that's how.

DEAR POLLY — Now that they are going out of style, don't discard those very short dresses. You can hem them and use for everyday wear as blouses to wear with pants or skirts. — ANGELINA.

DEAR POLLY — After giving baby a bath, new mothers will find they can put lotion on baby and dress him much faster if they have put the plastic bottle of lotion in the tub of warm water while baby was getting his bath. — PAULETTE.

Polly pays $1.00 for every idea used. Send them to her, % this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY — We had wanted a dispenser with hand lotion in it in our kitchen, so when one of those mustard jars with a dispenser top was empty it was cleaned, some flowers cut from adhesive-backed paper put on it and then filled with lotion. — JENE.

DEAR POLLY — I use zip-lock plastic food storage bags to protect silver items. This keeps them tarnish-free for long periods. — SHARON G.
(Polly's note: Plastic dry cleaning bags loosely wrapped around silver also do a good job, but NEVER, NEVER use plastic wrap that clings and might be smoothed over a piece of silver.)

DEAR POLLY — My Pointer is for dampening stamps. I call it my "stamp licker." I cut a thin round of foam to fit into an empty compact. When dampened, it's great for moistening stamps. I painted a happy face on the mirror. — GEORGIA.

DEAR POLLY — My daughter, 5, is always asking how many more days till an approaching special event. We make a paper chain with a link for each day remaining. Each day she pulls off a link and, thus, visually learns how to understand the passing of time. — BRENDA.

DEAR POLLY — I recycle my panty hose into three parts. First, I cut them off to make panties to wear around home. When the feet are good I make anklets to wear with slacks. The knee sections are cut into roughly 4-inch sections, soap pieces are slipped inside and the ends tied. These are used for washcloths. Being a bit rough, they work fine. — H.P.

DEAR POLLY — I had a white crinkle patent handbag that would not come clean. I washed it thoroughly, removing all polish. After drying, I applied shoe-polish dye in circles so there'd be no streaks and, when dry, rubbed to a shine. I left the clean handles and sidefolds white. The dye even holds up in the rain! — LILLIAN.
